By Eric Pierce, City Editor

DOWNEY – Another record-setting crowd packed the Stonewood Center parking lot Saturday in support of Arc of Southeast Los Angeles' annual Arc Walk for Independence, the non-profit organization's annual fundraiser to assist people with mental and developmental disabilities.

More than 2,800 walkers participated in the event, raising more than $100,000, said executive director Kevin MacDonald.

"The support from the community was tremendous," said MacDonald. "In addition to our corporate sponsors, the neighbors came out, the churches came out...The Arc was overwhelmed with the love and support shown to us."

Kevin MacDonald

Phillip Palmer of ABC-7 served as the event's host. Palmer, who missed last year's walk as he recovered from surgery after donating a kidney, was honored with the Arc Spirit Award for his "spirit of giving."

The Laker Girls made an appearance – leading the crowd in stretching exercises – and colorful clowns mingled with children. Acapulco Restaurant prepared and served complimentary breakfast burritos to walkers, and Coca-Cola donated almost 4,000 bottles of water.

"Somebody asked me what my next step is, and it's to keep getting bigger and better," said MacDonald. "We've already started the search for next year's sponsors."

Next year's Arc Walk will take place March 28, 2009.

Louisiana flavor. Get ready to say "Bonjour!" and explore "La Belle France" – indeed, it is the beautiful France. Laissez les bon temps roulette!

They spent over a year working for the Louisiana Folklife Center at Northwestern State University in Natchitoches, where they produced the music and publicity of the 1989 Folk Festival. Music still vibrates in the memory

By Henry Veneracion, Staff Writer

In the run-up to last Saturday's third and last performance of this the Golden Jubilee season by the Downey Symphony Orchestra, Downey Symphonic Society's Joyce Sherwin touted Giuseppe Verdi's Overture to Nabucco, which sets the stage for the story of the "dramatic conflict of the Hebrew slaves and their Babylonian captors," as "stirring." It was.

She also characterized the music of the concert centerpiece, Felix Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor, Op. 64, as "melodious." It was also that, and more. I am partial to the violin, having tried to learn it myself once in early youth, and I know how hard the road to its mastery can be.

Twenty three-year-old violin soloist Danielle Belen Nesmith, a recent honors graduate of the USC Thornton School of Music, played the piece flawlessly, I thought, producing a hauntingly beautiful rendering, comparable to the artistry of, say, a Jascha Heifetz.

I note that she recently played the Brahms Violin Concerto as a soloist with the Colborn Conservatory Orchestra, as well as won the 2005 USC Concerto Competition with her performance of the Bruch Violin Concerto with the USC Thornton Symphony under the direction of Carl St. Clair. These I'd like to see her perform. Perhaps the Society can invite her again to Downey?

Sherwin also said listening to Modest Mussorgsky's Pictures at a Exhibition, portraying the composer himself walking through a memorial gallery of the Russian architect Victor Hartmann's some 400 drawings and paintings, and "forming his own musical impressions" of each drawing or group of drawings, would be a "knock-yoursocks-off" experience. She was also dead on target on this one.

The piece of course contained musical hints and previews of the powerful, and to the classical music enthusiast, familiar, movements in the body of the work.

Popular ethicist to discuss the power of character

Michael Josephson, founder of the nationally-known Character Counts program, will speak at the Gangs Out of Downey luncheon this Wednesday.

BY BROOKE KARLI, STAFF WRITER

DOWNEY – Michael Josephson, founder and president of the Josephson Institute of Ethics, will address those attending the annual Gangs Out of Downey (GOOD) luncheon on Wednesday and discuss how good character is the backbone of any community and/or organization.

Josephson established the Institute in 1987 in honor of his parents. Since then, several national youth initiatives have been launched, including Character Counts (1992), the nation's leading char- Michael Josephson acter-education framework that reaches 6 million children through thousands of schools and service organizations, and Pursuing Victory with Honor (1999), a sportsmanship campaign endorsed by virtually every athletic organization in the United States.

According to the Institute's Web site, www.josephsoninstitute.org, their mission is "to improve the ethical quality of society by changing personal and organizational decision making and behavior."

"In order to keep gangs out of Downey, we need to start by building character," said Wendy Doty, Downey Unified School District Superintendent and a member of GOOD. "We've adopted the Character Counts culture in the city and school district and couldn't think of a better person to speak at this year's luncheon."

Doty went on to say that as Josephson normally charges hefty fees to speak at events, he is speaking at the GOOD luncheon free of charge.

At the age of 28, Josephson was the youngest person ever to be awarded tenure at a major law school. He taught law for 20 years before founding a publishing company and national chain of bar-exam preparation courses. When he founded the Institute, he retired as a law professor and publishing entrepreneur and instead worked as a full-time volunteer for the Institute. All revenue from his programs and services benefit the nonprofit, non-partisan organization.

In 1995, Josephson received the America's Award from President Ronald Reagan and was named as a non-partisan character-education expert to the Bush-Cheney Transition Advisory Committee in 2000.

He discusses ethics and character everyday on such radio stations as KNX-1070 and the American Forces Network, and contributes regularly to The Bench, a journal of the California Judges Association. He has also written numerous books including, "The Best Is Yet to Come," "Parenting to Build Character in Your Teen," and "Becoming an Exemplary Peace Officer."

For more information on the Josephson Institute of Ethics and the more than 1,000 programs offered, visit www.josephsoninstitute.org.

Mayor Gafin declares April 13-19 National Library Week in Downey

Mayor urges the community to "join the circle of knowledge at your library."

BY HENRY VENERACION, STAFF WRITER

DOWNEY—A delegation from the Library Advisory Board and the Board of the Friends of the Downey City Library Tuesday heard Mayor David Gafin proclaim the week of April 13-19 National Library Week.

The renewed spotlight on the role of libraries comes on the heels of the Downey City Library's recent ambitious and by and large successful "One Book, One Community" project which centered around Tom Brokaw's World War II-themed "The Greatest Generation."

In his proclamation, Gafin said "libraries help people of all ages and backgrounds find and interpret the information they need to live, learn, and work in the 21st century." Further, the mayor said, libraries "can help you discover a world of knowledge, both in person and online, as well as personal service and assistance in finding what you need, when you need it."

Cognizant of the impact libraries have in people's lives, he urged all residents to "visit the Downey City Library to enjoy the programs and take advantage of the wonderful library resources available."

He ended the proclamation with the words, "Join the circle of knowledge at your library."

In other action, the Council:

•Approved the special services agreement between the Human Resources Division and the law firm, Atkinson, Andelson, Loya, Ruud & Romo, for personnel-related matters, specifically in the areas of personnel investigation and harassment prevention training, which state law requires all California employers to provide;

•Set a public hearing for May 13 for the review and approval of the proposed 2008-09 Action Plan for the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and the Home Investment Partnership Program (HOME) grants, as required by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD);

•Approved the agreement for the assignment and assumption of the land lease between the city of Downey, Sonic-Downey Cadillac/Sonic-Massey Chevrolet (Sonic), and Argonaut Holdings (Argonaut) for property located at 11190 Florence Ave.; Argonaut, a subsidiary of General Motors, has recently bought the Sonic dealership;

•Approved a cash contract not to exceed $190,935 with APA Engineering for the preparation of plans, specifications and engineers' estimate and bid documents for the planned Imperial Highway Traffic Throughput and Safety Enhancements (PS&E) Project (Phase 2); and appropriated $200,000 from the Gas Tax Funds for the engineering services:

•Approved the Memorandum of Understanding with the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority of the Paramount Blvd. at Firestone Blvd. Intersection Improvement Project, in view of the projected increased traffic at the already busy intersection; "It is hoped," said resident Harold Tseklenis, "that the city can do something about the situation within the next two years, not 2030."

•Awarded certificates honoring Downey Police Officer Jaime Llamas and Corporals Justin Prentice (his 21st and 22nd such awards) and Jason Klevos, for their significant roles in retrieving stolen vehicles. Police Chief Roy Campos thanked the California Highway Patrol, especially its vanguard Santa Fe Springs office, for their "tremendous help" in these matters over the years, saying "They've always been there for us"; and •Heard a presentation by wheelchair-bound Richard Daggett who made suggestions for additional handicapped parking in the downtown business area in accordance with ADA guidelines.

In the meantime, Gafin announced the city has received confirmation that a lease agreement has been signed between Johnie's Broiler property owner Christos Smyrniotis and Bob's Big Boy, giving the latter the nod to operate a Bob's Big Boy restaurant while retaining as much of Johnie's Broiler's features as possible. The announcement drew approval and commendation from the various advocacy groups in attendance.

Councilman Kirk Cartozian confirmed the opening on Saturday, April 19 of the city's Farmers Market "in the vicinity of Cardono Square."

A few, well-chosen words about the importance of respect and civility towards the members of the City Council were delivered by one Jerry Aguero, who said he was from Texas and has been a Downey resident for a few years now. Decrying the drivel, the "unwarranted" vitriol, and the abuse hurled the council members' way by certain members of the audience, Aguero anointed himself the "Civility Watchdog," and vowed to uphold its spirit in future council sessions.

The Poet's Corner

A soldier's cry

Shrouded in darkness, the world I knew has vanished. A cloak of despair covers our paradise. Burning, rotting flesh, cries of agony, prayers for compassion. All falling on ears of men forever compromised. Men with souls long ago sold. Men without a soul to sell. Finding no peace on this mortal soil, seeking solace in death.

Unbearable, this is hell. The servant rises up, an angel with a devil's tongue. Falling in and out of hope.

For if anyone stands a chance against the gates of hell...

It will be soulless. - Gil Meza, Downey

I Drive a Cordless Heart

orchestrated by a knowledgeable and expert conductor. Music Director Sharon Lavery's stature as a conductor and music advocate with the youth of Downey grows with every brilliant performance.

2007 baton winner Roy Street, who lists piloting among his sundry skills, didn't say much before or after he conducted the concert-opening The Stars & Stripes Forever by John Philip Sousa. He didn't have to. His performance with the baton was creditable enough.

Next year's winner of the baton auction is Downey High School grad and a former Miss Downey, Rhoma Gewelber of La Mirada. Bill Hare says Saturday was the first time she attended a performance by the Downey Symphony. Her winning bid, conducted with panache by First Violinist and Downey Symphony Concertmaster Carolyn Osborn, daughter of the late Tom Osborn, was $2,100.

'There will be pain'

By Eric Pierce

he state of California is staring into the face of a $16 billion budget deficit, and the reality of the situation is that the Downey Unified School District, despite its spot-on history of fiscal conservativeness, will soon be forced to make painful decisions regarding staff and/or program cuts.

Our newspaper last week accurately listed the various areas DUSD is looking at to trim up to $8 million from its operating budget. But the proposals were just that, proposals, and only reflective of an absolute worst case scenario.

"Actually, it was beyond worst case," said Superintendent Wendy Doty. "That would be Armageddon."

Doty, who began her career with DUSD as a teacher in 1976, made 30 presentations to Downey educators in the past month. She said she asked teachers to write down any budget cut suggestions they may have had. Their suggestions - even if illegal and impossible to implement - were included in the budget cut proposal list you read last week.

So while cuts are coming, last week's list may have been misleading if taken at face value.

No teachers within DUSD have lost their jobs thus far. And barring any sort of legislative reprieve, the school year will not be reduced to 166 days to match the schedule of the Los Angeles Unified School District.

To be fair, Doty said the possibility of a rollback in salaries by either 1 or 2 percent is remote. But if it came to that, Doty, who operates on a contract, said she would cut her own salary as well.

"For years, a broken budget system has taken California's children on a roller coaster ride of increased funding when revenues are flush and cuts when revenues slow down," reads a "fact sheet" provided by the Governor's Office. "This feast-or-famine cycle hurts our children, our schools and our state."

Indeed, the sting of a dysfunctional state budget is felt top to bottom.

The immediate financial outlook for DUSD is depressing. Cuts will be made and they will hurt.

As Doty said: "There will be pain."

Thank you to the kind soul who delivered to our office a CD of pictures taken at Saturday's Arc Walk. Because we don't know who you are, we couldn't properly credit your front page photo. But, again, thank you!

Letters to the Editor:

One world under God

Dear Editor:

Is it true that no one from the correct thinking responded to "Patriotism and Dissent" (The Downey Patriot, 3/28/08) and now to "Rewriting the Pledge" (The Downey Patriot, 4/4/08)? That is hard to believe and I also include myself as responsible. How many years need to go by, how many voices need to be heard that restates the truth - we are "...one nation under God." In fact, the reality is that we are one world under God. Yes, there are those who do not believe but that does not make it any less fact. Put it to the test, put it to the vote, God and His answers will always prove to be correct.

I agree with Mr. Rodriguez ("Rewriting the Pledge," 4/4/08) – we are

Letters to the Editor:

Common thefts

Dear Editor:

I just came up with a new reason besides their lousy gas mileage to get rid of your trucks and SUVs. A low rider configuration is less likely to have its catalytic converter stolen. What, you say?

I used my truck Tuesday evening, and then didn't use it again until Wednesday evening. When I started the truck Wednesday evening, I was greeted with a deafening roar. Obviously, something was wrong with my exhaust system, although the truck had worked fine the night before. Thursday morning I discovered that a piece of my exhaust system about 18 inches long was missing. Apparently, thieves got under the truck Tuesday night sometime and removed the catalytic converter. The truck was parked on our circle drive, and someone was asleep in bed no more than 20 feet away from the vehicle. The repair shop and Downey police say this type of theft is common.

That got me thinking. A high road clearance vehicle is more easily worked on than the average sedan. In the latter case a jack is required to lift the vehicle to provide access to the converter. I also concluded that it would be better to park my truck on the street rather than on my driveway. On the street, a thief with his legs stuck out as he removed the converter would be easy to see and vulnerable to being run over.

It's rotten that we have to think like thieves to protect ourselves. I have always been pleased that I was able to keep the street clear in front of my house. And even if I did park on the street, I would have to do something different on trash pickup day. I guess I could set my alarm so I wake up early on trash pickup day so I can move my truck to avoid a ticket.

I know there are those who are having a hard time these days and I'm sorry for them, but I hate to have to spend my time trying to out-think potential thieves. I am surrounded by mansions under construction, and I don't feel safe on my own property.

Maybe it's time to move on.

Open letter to City Council

Dear Editor:

I am here in front of the City Council to say a few words about what happened to me the last time I came here. It was my first time and I was surprised at what I heard.

I am a believer of free speech. This rant is not about freedom of speech. It is about civility. Just as we cannot yell "fire" in a crowded theater, neither should we be allowed to call you, our elected officials, names or talk to you disrespectfully. There are ways to say what is on your mind without calling any of you names. We may disagree and I'm sure at times we will agree to disagree.

You all have earned our respect. You put your lives on hold for all Downians. You do this work on your own time. You don't get paid and your families don't see as much of you because you want to make a difference. You're not liars, cowards or idiots. I believe this is the purist form of government. We don't get to meet our leaders any closer than this.

You are right there in front of us to listen to us. So if you were liars we would know. You can't be idiots because you got elected. And as for being cowards, all of you had the guts to run for office, putting in time and treasure, going door to door, talking to all of us at different meetings. Taking our criticisms during your campaigns. I believe all of you work for us because you love Downey. I know you want to make a difference. I know that all of you call Downey your home. We are all neighbors here.

I got up in front of you last time because I was asked, "What are you looking at?" after Lennie [Whittington] went off on his hateful rant. When he sat down he called me an Egyptian and I took it as a racist remark. I am American by birth, a Texan by the grace of God and a Downian by choice. When the meeting was over a different man asked whose district I lived in. When I told him he said, "Well that explains it." As I said before, I had never been to a city council meeting in my life. Now I didn't know who Lennie was and I have never met the man in my life. I didn't know there was a border line for civility. I didn't know that I lived in a city that would allow people to be racist in this chamber. I don't care where you are from or the color of your skin or that you lean to the left or right. There are enough people in Washington that spew out hate. I don't see why we should have to put up with it here. I'm not afraid of his nastiness and I have thick skin and an even thicker head. All of you have the power to stop meanness and hateful language in this chamber. From the people that clean graffiti to you, Mr. Mayor, I want to say I know that all of us will stand by all of you when it comes to civility. I will continue to stand here before you every meeting to be a champion for civility. You've earned our respect, our gratitude and our civility. - Jerry Aguero,

What the Caravan meant to us

Dear Editor:

Gordon, my sixth-grade son, slept in a little tent in a sleeping bag on a beach in a cove on the shores of Lake Mojave in Arizona, near the Nevada border. Running water? Not on your life. This was real camping in a way I could never provide.

He was camping over Spring Break with the YMCA's Easter Caravan. I wish to thank the Y and all those involved in this outreach to male youth in our community. This is the 36th year of operation and I know of one counselor who has participated each and every year - Tod Corrin. This program desperately needs to continue and it is my hope that my son can attend each year eligible as a camper (through the ninth grade), and then continue on as a junior helper and, eventually, a full-fledged counselor. It would come full circle if he can give back for what he is currently receiving.

On the Easter Caravan experience there were physical activities, many involving water sports. That's another area where I am out of my element completely! Gordon went boating, tubing, jet skiing, kayaking, attempted parasailing, and other water games. He has not talked about fishing, basketball or mountain biking so I think he probably passed on many of the offerings. As much or as little as desired is what the campers do. The good food cooked up each meal is highlighted and punctuated in his conversations, with laughs about "formal night." He did take a white shirt, but refused a tie and instead took pink Easter bunny type ears - I was horrified! That probably made his outfit even more fun for him. Looking silly and horrifying a parent.

I know that history has been correct – a mother's love is instinctual, unconditional and forever. No influence is more powerful. There is no substitute. My wonderful husband died two years ago and I am fully aware that the connection between father and son is also unique. A father affirms a child. He can help instill integrity, value, and self-assurance. It is often a relationship built through physical activity. And, from a father a boy learns how to treat a woman with respect. Yes, I miss my husband and I worry that while doing the best I can for my son that I am falling short.

The national statistics are frightening. Of those children from fatherless homes, 63 percent account for youth suicides, 85 percent for behavioral disorders, /l percent of high dropouts, and 85 percent of all youth sitting in prison today. Some kids just make bad choices. Others might not, had they received a father's guidance.

to be thankful to Mr. Gutierrez for his willingness to "act responsibly on his convictions." Just let us add, Mr. Gutierrez has that comfort in his actions because he does not live in a nation that provides "liberty and justice for all." We are a nation of laws. The problem comes when one chooses not to obey the law or when the law is needing to be changed and we do not have the right persons to help make that change.

Most U.S. citizens when they say the Pledge of Allegiance are speaking from the heartfelt conviction they have for the love of this country. Very few, if any, are pledging allegiance to a piece of cloth.

Taking care of business

Dear Editor:

Careless billing oversights continue to undermine the outstanding work of medical professionals at Downey Regional Medical Center. A recent hospitalization of my 98-year-old mother, during which she received excellent medical attention, has produced yet again many confusing and incorrect notices from the Medical Center's billing department/collision agency.

The issue is that my mother has insurance and the hospital has all her information, therefore I shouldn't be receiving letters asking whether or not she has insurance to cover a remaining balance. These notices require immediate attention and I spend much time on the phone or in person attempting to respond to their requests, but to no avail. The most recent letter about my mother's "lack" of insurance even offered medical assistance or "Charity Care." This is a very tempting offer.

Maybe this is the solution - no insurance at all. Who should take responsibility for these types of billing problems? Wouldn't it be in the best interest of the hospital and its patients to correct these ongoing mistakes? -Hannelore Drechsler,

Cry me a river

Dear Editor:

Don't want to stand for the Pledge of Allegiance ("Patriotism and Dissent, 3/28/08) because America is a racist country run by a bunch of racist gabachos and Latinos have no opportunity? Hmmm, let's see. My congresswoman is Latino. My state assemblyman is Latino. The mayor of Los Angeles is Latino. The [former] mayor of Downey is Latino. The chief of police is Latino. Many of the members of the fire and police departments are Latino.

The president of my class, when I graduated from high school, was Latino. The class valedictorian was Latino. Many of the businesses in Downey and California are owned by Latinos. People from all over the world, including Latinos, are trying to get into this country any way they can. Special help is given in our school system for Latinos.

In the state, county, and many cities, work is given to Latino businesses in preference to gabacho businesses. Preference is given to Latinos in civil service jobs over gabachos. My boss, where I worked, was Latino. Preference is given to Latinos when applying for college. When I was in the military, many of the guys I served with were Latino and were just as patriotic as me. Some maybe more. Some of the officers I served under were Latino. I was lucky - I didn't have to serve with draftees. Many of the new millionaires in California, even Downey, are Latinos.

There are more examples, but I think I got the idea across. Still, there are those, a few, who use the prejudice excuse for their failures. Some even claim they are self-educated because they get information from Wikipedia on the Web and give no credit to the system that taught them to read and write.

I think it was out most succinctly when I showed the "Pledge of Allegiance" letter to someone: they read it and said, "Look at me. Wahhh Wahhh Wahhh."

- -Russell Rankin,
- Downey

The YMCA teaches things such as manners and how to deal with peer pressure. There is time set aside for talks with the counselors about little life issues or larger concerns.

From the bottom of my heart I thank each and every one of you young men for stepping up for the youth in our community. These men work hard to create a most wonderful, rewarding week. Every person who did any one thing and touched the life of my son, I thank you. Also, thanks to the supporting families - the wives and loved ones who support this outreach effort. Your sacrifice of precious vacation time away from your husband is appreciated immensely.

It is impossible to describe to you the enthusiasm Gordon has for the program. How much of his heart and spirit were lifted you may not realize. Only a mother can realize some things. Everyone in life has a destiny and I thank you for helping my son reach his.

The power of education Dear Editor:

What is the current dropout rate for Warren and Downey High Schools, 25 to 30 percent? ("DUSD Considering Sweeping Cuts in Response to State Budget Crisis," 4/4/08) Take a look at our dear Governor's biography. You will not see any college education, as his actions clearly demonstrate. This is typical of the existing political regime that is destroying our country. This is the regime that you voted for, the political regime that intimidates and bullies their populace. Keep following the crowd like little sheep and this is what you end up with.

Luckily, Downey has one of the best educational programs with superior educators. I know they will do everything in their power to not let our children fail in spite of these cuts. Without suitably educating our youth, we soon will be a third world country working in factories making toys and additional products for other countries. At least we won't have to worry about putting a good education to waste! Wake up America!

Curbside assistance

Dear Editor:

I received a notice concerning the curb painting address in our city. I am glad the city approved only one group, the Neighborhood Curb Painting Service to give us this important service, so we can be safer, and the law enforcement, firefighters, and emergency personnel will be able to locate addresses in the night faster.

In the past, individuals without a city permit were conducting this service in a very unprofessional way. Now, the city granted permission to one group that has painted more than one million addresses in 12 years, and promise an outstanding service.

It's about time. —Andi J. Fredes, Downey

Paging Dr. Alan Frischer...

BY DR. ALAN FRISCHER

→ hould I be taking a daily aspirin? This is a question I am asked daily. Once again, as is the case for so important many medical issues, the answer is... it depends!

It was in California during the late 1940's that its blood thinning properties were noticed, and in 1988 the FDA proposed its use to reduce the risk of heart attack. With the development of ibuprofen (Motrin, Advil), acetaminophen (Tylenol) and Naproxen (Aleve), its use for fever and pain relief has lessened in importance.

Also, since the early 1980's, it is no longer recommended for use by children, due to its association with Reye's Syndrome.

Aspirin's widespread use today is due to its ability to thin the blood, keep it from clotting, and thereby reduce the risk of heart attacks and stroke. In addition, there is promising data on the possible slowing of cancers including colon cancer. All of this, and it's cheap, too!

Current guidelines urge adults at risk of having a first heart attack in the next five years to take a daily dose of aspirin. (The proper dose for heart protection is 81mg daily. No additional benefits were found at higher doses.) Research suggests that if 1,000 people who had a 3 percent chance of suffering a non-fatal heart attack in the next five years took aspirin daily, then four to 12 of them would likely avoid a serious cardiovascular event

The downside, however, is that four out of 1,000 would also end up in the hospital with a major gastrointestinal bleed, and another one in 1,000 would have a life-threatening hemorrhagic stroke. Further possible side effects include bleeding in the brain, kidney failure, liver damage in chronic alcohol users, ringing in the ears and hearing loss, and potentially life-threatening allergic reactions.

Will you be among those who will avoid a heart attack by taking a daily aspirin, or will you instead be hospitalized with a gastrointestinal bleed or another terrible side effect? How can you determine the odds of whether you will be helped harmed by taking or aspirin? Calculate your personal risk of having a heart attack in the next five years. There are several excellent Web sites (listed below) that can help you do this. You will input your age, blood pressure, cholesterol level, gender, and smoking and diabetes history. The higher your five-year risk of heart attack, the higher will be the benefit of a daily dose of aspirin.

Does aspirin help both women and men? Research out of the University of British Columbia, Vancouver found that aspirin cuts the risk of a second heart attack in both men and women, but reduces the risk of a first heart attack only in men. The data does suggest that aspirin offers more of a stroke prevention effect in women than first attack heart prevention. Regardless, aspirin is commonly used for both men and women who are at high risk of heart attack or stroke and who have multiple risk factors for heart disease - such as those who smoke, have hypertension, diabetes, or a strong family history of heart disease.

Current exciting research is examining how aspirin and other non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAID's) such as Motrin and Advil might serve to block an enzyme (COX) involved in cancer development. The most conclusive evidence comes from research on colon cancer, with breast cancer studies also showing great promise. However, the benefits are not apparent until after more than a decade of use, with maximum risk reduction at very high doses. At these doses, aspirin's side effects (gastrointestinal bleeding in particular) can become a very big problem. The final word is not in on NSAID's and their potential for cancer prevention.

It is clear that aspirin is not appropriate for everyone. Let me leave you with these guidelines:

• Do not take aspirin if you are under the age of 16.

• Do not take aspirin if you have a history of uncontrolled high blood pressure, liver or kidney disease, stomach ulcers, heartburn, upset stomach, asthma, or bleeding problems.

• Do not take aspirin if you are currently taking an anticoagulation drug (blood thinner) unless your doctor tells you to do so, if you consume more than three alcoholic drinks per day, if you are pregnant or nursing, or if you have aspirininduced asthma or other allergies to aspirin.

• Do take aspirin if you have none of the above problems and your calculated or physician evaluated risk of heart attack, stroke, or colon cancer warrants its use. Use a risk calculation Web site like one of the following to help evaluate your personal heart attack risk:

- www.med-decisions.com
- www.riskscore.org.uk • www.chd-taskforce.de

• Consult with your physician if you think that a daily aspirin might be right for you.

Julie 'Ace' Patrick is one of Roller Derby's finest competitors

Downey's Julie 'Ace' Patrick was voted into the National Roller Derby Hall of Fame in 2004. Today, at age 82, she still carries a certain fondness for the sport.

BY BROOKE KARLI,

STAFF WRITER DOWNEY - Working as a cashier at a theatre located in downtown Buffalo, N.Y., 21-yearold Julie Patrick was invited to try out for the Roller Derby after two of the organization's players bought tickets for that evening's show.

Although she wasn't particularly fond of roller skating, she was familiar with the Derby and enjoyed watching the games when they came to town.

"There were only two things that came to Buffalo that people actually looked forward to - the Ice Capades and the Roller Derby," said Patrick, a 37-year Downey resident.

In short, Roller Derby consisted of two opposing teams, which skated around a 128-foot-long oval track - slanted at a 45-degree angle - in an attempt to score on the other team. Women competed against women and men competed against men. Although most teams had seven players, only five could be on the track at a time. Games consisted of four 13-minute quarters with no time-outs, just an intermission half-way through the game. Players wore only T-shirts, shorts, tights - which had built-in knee pads - and of course, roller skates. Deciding to give it a shot and tryout for the team, Patrick went to the next audition.

"I kept falling and getting back up - falling and getting back up," she said. "Somehow, someway, they still took me. I asked the coach, Bill Bogash - who married my husband's sister – why he took me, and he said, 'I liked the way you got up.' Funny thing is, I only got up quickly because I was embarrassed of myself."

Patrick began training right away and six months later, competed in her first game as a "jammer" for the Jersey Jolters in 1946 ("jammers" served primarily as the scorer of the team). Like many sports today, players in the organization were contracted to play on certain teams and had to remain on those teams until their contract was up. Patrick, now 82, recalls getting offers from agents around the world following a game at Madison Square Gardens in New York City a couple of years later, when she was playing for the New York Chiefs.

Over time, Patrick was given the nickname "Ace" because of her ability to score points in games and became one of the Derby's most valuable players.

"When we started, we never realized how big we were," she explained. "We just wanted to play and go to cocktail lounges."

As the Roller Derby gained wide-spread popularity, Patrick spent most of her days living out of a suitcase, as she traveled from one corner of the world to another.

"It was great – the organization paid for everything: airfare, hotel rooms and food," she said. "And we got to travel all around the world and discover places such as England, Spain, France, Poland, Australia, and of course, numerous Patrick's own family had a hard time appreciating her career.

"In those days," she said, "a 'good girl' never left home unless they got married. So when I tried out for the Derby, I was kicked out of my house."

Her family eventually got passed it and at a game in Philadelphia, it was announced that her father was in attendance. As he stood up, the crowd cheered and he began to cry.

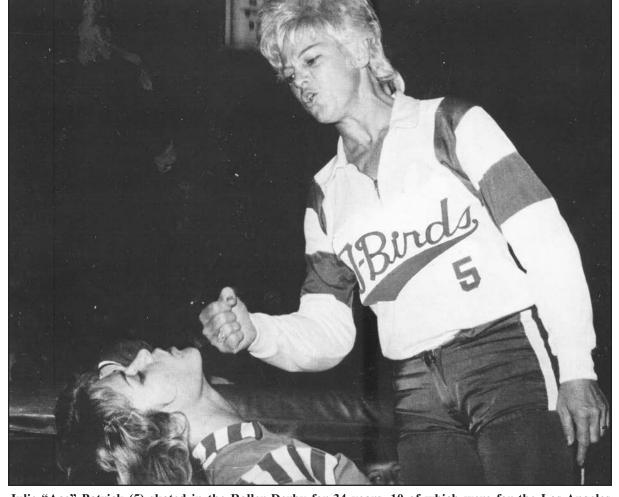

"I will never forget that moment," Patrick said. "That was the highlight of my life and career. "My mother, on the other hand, attended one game early on in my career and from that point on, every letter, every phone call was 'please don't skate anymore."" teams trying to score points might attract more interest from audiences. With a few tweaks to the game, the Derby was up and running and in no time, venues were sold out and more teams were added to the organization. The Derby thrived for many years, but when Bill Griffith took over the organization in the 1970s, it began to dwindle.

"A lot of money was unaccounted for and missing," Patrick said. "We weren't selling out stadiums like we used to. No one ever thought the Derby would die, but it did - and no one has been able to get it back up again."

At 55 years old, Patrick was the oldest woman skater to quit. She followed up her career as a skater

Julie "Ace" Patrick (5) skated in the Roller Derby for 34 years, 10 of which were for the Los Angeles Thunderbirds. She was one of the organization's leading scorers and was inducted into the National Roller Derby Hall of Fame in 2004. Photo courtesy Julie Patrick states throughout the U.S."

Nine years into her career, in 1955, Patrick married Shelburn Gardner, who was also a player in the Derby, and who passed away in 1985.

"We all married skaters because we never had a chance to meet anybody else," said Patrick, who continued to go by her maiden name after marriage. "We were away from home more than 300 days a year. We hardly ever got a break."

At one point, Patrick doubted whether or not she could handle fame as her fan base continued to grow.

"When you start having people follow you home and you have to change vehicles, you begin to question whether or not you're cut out for the job," she said.

Patrick went on to explain that fans used to knock on her hotel room door in the middle of the night and ask for autographs.

"We had to be graceful to our fans because they were the bread and butter of our careers," she said. "We just learned to get used to it and appreciate it."

Due to strong Italian roots,

Patrick obviously continued to skate, breaking both her ankles and a few ribs throughout her career, and making upwards of $400 a week, which at the time, was considered a fortune. She spent the last 10 years of her skating career with the Los Angeles Thunderbirds, finally putting away her skates in 1980 after a 34-year career.

"The organization just began to fall apart and I thought it would be best to stop while on top," she said.

According to Patrick, Chicago entrepreneur Leo Seltzer created the Transcontinental Roller Derby in 1935, during the Great Depression. At first the Derby was a roller skating marathon pitting teams composed of a male and female skater against each other in a mystical race across the country. Sportswriter Damon Runyon suggested that body contact between with a 15-year stint in escrow.

In 2004, Patrick was inducted into the National Roller Derby Hall of Fame, an honor determined by the amount of time played and points scored. Fellow Derby players also voted as to who would be inducted.

Over the years, Patrick has remained in contact with players from the organization. Every year, for more than 30 years, players, managers, coaches, and anyone affiliated with the Roller Derby, reunite in Laughlin for a reunion. For Patrick, it's an event she looks forward to every year.

"It was just fantastic [playing in the Derby]," Patrick said. "I wouldn't trade it for anything. When people ask me if I would do it all over again, I say, 'In a New York minute.""

Downey vies for first place against Paramount

BY SCOTT COBOS, CONTRIBUTOR

DOWNEY – Days after struggling to keep the charging Warren Bears at bay, the Downey Vikings rebounded with a win at Gahr High School last Friday, winning 2-0.

Downey's pitching showed up versus the Gladiators, shutting them down and giving the Vikings their second shutout of the season.

The Vikings are just two games out of first place in their division going into the round robin section of the schedule this week versus first place Paramount High School.

Paramount has yet to lose a game in league this year going into Wednesday's game at Blair Field in Long Beach, the closest being a onerun win versus bottom of the cellar Lynwood.

The Pirates and Vikings will be facing off in a night cap tonight at Downey's Yanez Field. The two teams will be under the lights with the first pitch at 7 p.m.

Warren

Just slipping by, the Warren Bears beat the Dominguez Dons 6-3 last Friday afternoon at the Major League Baseball Academy at Dominguez.

Three days after winning a slugfest with Downey High School, 10-8, Warren was unable to muster up some of that same explosiveness offensively but managed to put up enough to get by Dominguez.

Dominguez historically has not done well against any of the San Gabriel Valley League teams and has not finished higher than third in years. This year, the Dons have not won a game.

Westover was born on Feb. 25, 1932 in Rexburg, Idaho to Arnold and Mary Ann Westover. While living in Rexburg, he built the Family Lodge, a place he created for his own family to gather for reunions and other affairs.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret and many other family members.

Services have already taken place and were entrusted to the Downey Zrelak Family Mortuary.

Maria Hawa worked for Downey Unified

DOWNEY - Maria Hawa, a 30-year Downey resident and employee of Downey Unified School District, passed away on April 3. She was 61. She is survived by her husband, Zak; children, Donna, Danny and Andrew; and grandchildren, Daryan, Ella, Kaelyn and Ethan.

Angelo Cardono named 'Rotarian of the Year'

By Henry Veneracion, Staff Writer

To the many honors and encomiums fine jewelry maker Angelo Rafael Cardono has accumulated over the course of a life characterized by an abiding passion for work, service, and flying, add "2008 Rotarian of the Year."

Cardono received a crystal trophy emblematic of the honor April 1, along with a proclamation from Mayor David Gafin, read by Councilman Kirk Cartozian, lauding his selection and his continued long service to the community. But it was the comments by "a special group" of friends and colleagues who have known him best through the years that caught (I thought) the spirit of the man.

First to pay tribute was Domingue DiMario. There's always goodnatured banter and ribbing at Downey Rotary meetings, and when DiMario initially said Cardono was born in Connecticut, the honoree promptly disagreed, saying, "No, I was born in Rhode Island." You can guess the ensuing exchange between the two close friends. DiMario: "What difference does it make where you were born? Connecticut, Rhode Island. It doesn't matter really. If you correct me again, I'll let you do your own tribute." To which Cardono motioned as if to zipper his lips.

"Besides," DiMario went on, "I am speaking from memory, to prove to my wife [who was in attendance] that I have no Alzheimer's." Order restored, DiMario proceeded to lionize Cardono as someone who has "accomplished a lot of things," including: service in the Navy; his 60-year perfect attendance record at the Rotary, along with his similarly long involvement with the Rotary's Pancakes for Breakfast (which he founded), as well as with the L.A. County Aviation Commission; the jewelencrusted necklace he crafted for Burt Reynolds that went to Lonie Anderson; the medallions he designed and struck as gifts to the Apollo IV astronauts; and his retracing Lindbergh's solo flight "over the top of the world" to Paris.

Retired Norwalk Superior Court judge Charlie Frisco recalled the time when, in their younger days, he and Cardono negotiated the canyons of Manhattan aboard their scooter.

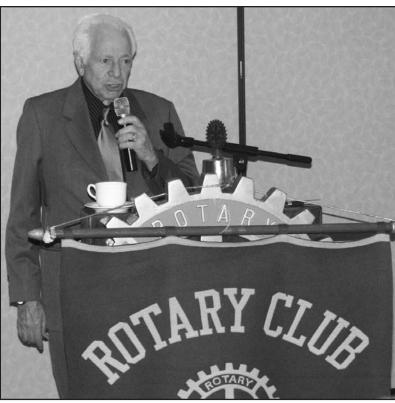

In response, Cardono joked how he had the good sense to move out of Rhode Island "when I had the chance" and settled here in Downey. "I found a home here and here I'll stay for the rest of my life.'

He reiterated his favorite injunction, "The price of Rotary membership is attendance," and said he was able to maintain his perfect attendance record because he would "make up" his absences no matter where he found himself --- "whether I was in China or Taiwan or Tokyo or wherever...where I got the best food anyway."

He noted how for nine years he was the youngest Rotarian when he first joined up, "until George Cade came and replaced me as the youngest." Cade is the only other Downey Rotarian who has managed a 100 percent attendance record.

"But I take the most pride in the fact that I was the one who came up with the financing scheme that eventually led to the formation of the Los Padrinos Juvenile Hall," Cardono said.

Henry Vernacion is an honorary member of Downey Rotary.

Accolades, praise and awards were heaped upon Rotarian of the Year Angelo Cardono, a longtime Downey Rotary member who has yet to miss a meeting in his 60 years of membership.
