Elderly man found safe after wandering 7 miles

DOWNEY - An elderly Downey resident with Alzheimer's disappéared last week but was found safe thanks to a tracking device he was wearing.

The man, identified only as Angel, was with family members at Banc of California stadium on July 26 when he wandered away.

Despite using a walker, Angel was able to walk 7.1 miles away from the stadium before he was located. He was treated for Police were able to find Angel because he was wearing a tracking bracelet provided by L.A. County as part of its Found Program. The voluntary program offers tracking bracelets to people with Alzheimer's, autism, dementia, or another cognitive impairment that puts them at risk of wandering.

Since the bracelets were offered in September 2018, approximately 346 trackable bracelets have been distributed to L.A. County residents. For details on how to obtain a free bracelet, visit LAfound.com.

Mosquitoes in Bellflower test positive for West Nile

BELLFLOWER - A mosquito has tested positive for West Nile virus in Bellflower, vector officials announced.

West Nile virus activity in Los Angeles County "is off to a slow start this year," said the Greater Los Angeles County Vector Control Officials, however, said they expected more activity in the hot months ahead. They also cited 445 positive mosquito samples in Southern California areas outside Los Angeles County.

There is no cure for West Nile virus, which can cause fever, headache, body aches, nausea and skin rashes. The virus can be fatal in some cases.

Mosquitos breed wherever there is standing water, such as plant saucers, old tires, nonfunctional swimming pools, and air conditioner drip pans.

Downey High accepting Hall of Fame nominations

DOWNEY High School is now accepting nominations for its next class of Hall of Fame inductees.

Started in 1999, the Hall of Fame recognizes people in six categories: arts; athletics; education; business; community or government; and professional.

Candidates graduated from Downey High School at least 10 years ago, or have contributed to the school in other ways.

Notable inductees including singers Karen and Richard Carpenter, deep sea explorer and Titanic discoverer Robert Ballard, and Metallica front man James Hetfield.

Nomination forms are available on Downey High's website. This year's Hall of Fame ceremony is scheduled for Nov. 1. Eric Pierce, editor

Kaiser offers pay hikes as labor negotiations continue

Kaiser Permanente says it has offered 3% annual wage increases to its local workers.

Kaiser and the SEIU-UHW are under growing pressure to strike a deal before their contract expires Sept. 30.

DOWNEY Kaiser Permanente has presented a proposal to leadership of the Coalition of Kaiser Permanente Unions that would provide annual pay increases and "maintain excellent employee while also creating a program that would seek to reduce the national shortage of health care workers.

In the coming days, Coalitionrepresented employees receive information that outlines a proposed agreement that positions Kaiser Permanente – including its members, employees and local communities - for a sustainable future as the organization works to make its high-quality, integrated model of care more affordable and accessible.

"Kaiser Permanente and the Coalition of Kaiser Permanente Unions have been working together toward a mutually beneficial national agreement, as we have done for decades," said Arlene F. Peasnall Senior Vice President, HR Consulting and National Human Resources at Kaiser Permanente.

"Our most recent proposal was presented to Coalition leadership on Friday, July 26, and we are now sharing it directly with employees to ensure they receive the full offer accurately. We are hopeful that our employees will value our proposal and the Coalition will move forward with us to reach a new agreement. Our goal is to continue to make Kaiser Permanente a great place to give and receive care."

bargaining proposal would provide employees with the following "best-in-class" conditions:

Wage increases. The average salary of Coalition-represented employees is already higher than market averages. "Mindful of our goal to improve the affordability of health care and engage our employees in the effort, the current proposal provides guaranteed wage increases across the board each year through 2022," Kaiser said. This includes:

In Northern and Southern California, annual increases of 3% each year through 2022.

In Hawaii, the Mid-Atlantic States, Northwest and Washington, annual increases of 3%, achieved through a 2% increase in base pay, combined with a 1% payment each year through 2022.

In Colorado – where we have been making changes to our business to become more competitive and stay relevant in the market - increases of 1% in 2019, and 2% each year in 2020 through 2022.

Opportunities for new hires. Kaiser Permanente and the Coalition are proposing a program to be a part of the solution to address the national shortage of health care workers and help develop the next generation of unionized workers in health care.

The proposal includes newhire training positions for certain roles and $40 million for a Workforce Development Fund. Newly trained workers will have the opportunity to join the Kaiser Permanente workforce in training steps while they learn on the job, culminating in employment at Step 1 of the organization's pay scales.

Retirement security. The proposal preserves the existing pension plan along defined with other strong retirement benefits. It also includes an increase to the Retiree Medical Health Reimbursement Account (HRA) to $2,500 for each year of service beginning in 2021 with an agreement to eliminate the premium subsidy for new hires.

Career mobility. The proposal includes a more robust tuition reimbursement program for employees that adds an additional $250 to travel funds.

Affordable health care. The Working side-by-side with the proposal includes a pharmacy utilization approach incents employees greater responsibility for their health by rewarding them for increasing their use of mail-order prescriptions.

> "Kaiser Permanente and its members rely on employees represented by the Coalition of Kaiser Permanente Unions," said Peasnall. "This most recent offer is a testament to the dedication, compassion and skill those employees bring to work each and every day."

> More than 55,000 Kaiser employees Permanente California are members of SEIU-United Healthcare Workers West (SEIU-UHW)

> Their contract with Kaiser Permanente expires Sept. 30, 2019.

Demographic Change: In the 90s, Downey grappled with racial tensions

Part V of VII

By Aron Ramirez Contributor

Life for the first middle-class Mexican Americans in Downey was shaped by their place as the demographic minority. To avoid race-based tensions, they took to an assimilated civic identity that emphasized "Americanness" in

The previous two installments in this series have shown just how middle-class Mexican Americans did so: first through "Americanness" in business, language, and politics; then by metropolitan Mexicanness in private and public spaces. The assimilated civic identity had, in times of stable demographics, sufficed to prevent race-based tensions. But the rapidity of demographic change that started in 1988 disrupted this equilibrium.

In this week's installment, I will narrate some of the more uncomfortable episodes in this series. Before I do so, I wish to reiterate the utility of thinking through and talking about difficult periods in history. I discuss these events to recognize their existence, not to place blame on any one group. To be silent about these events may be easier, but silence is a form of historical amnesia. Furthermore, talking about racial tensions in the early 1990s enables us to fully appreciate the communitybuilding made by the end of the millennium.

These episodes were neither anomalous nor unique to Downey. Rather, this period of tension in the early 1990s fits into a broader context of racial unease in the United States, punctuated by two sensational Los Angeles trials.

In 1991, two California Highway Patrol (CHP) officers tried to pull Rodney King over for reckless driving. Fearing a violation of his parole, King attempted to evade CHP. He was eventually stopped by several Los Angeles Police Départment (LAPD) officers, who then brutalized him during his arrest. Footage captured by a passerby captivated newscast audiences, and when a trial jury acquitted the four officers, rioters took to the

Three years later, the "Trial of the Century" again brought race to the forefront of Angeleno consciousness when lawyers for O.J. Simpson argued that the LAPD framed Simpson, a black man, for murder.

Bea Romano remembered as an artist and community advocate

By Lorine Parks Society Columnist

Bea Romano, community activist in all things musical, inspired her own memorial service at St. Raymond's Catholic Church in Downey.

Family and friends walked out of the church to the lively hymn, "Dance, then, wherever you may be, I am the Lord of the Dance, said he." The words follow a traditional carol that portrays Jesus' life and mission as a dance. Bea's musical group, When Pigs Fly, loved to perform it.

Larry Latimer

November 10, 1957 - July 23, 2019

Larry Latimer was born on November 10, 1957 and passed on from this life on July 23, 2019. He was 61 years old and lived almost his entire life in Downey.

Larry was a loving husband, father, son, brother, uncle, and friend to many. He is survived by his wife of 20 years, Rose, son Erik, daughter-in-law Lucy, and beloved Jack Russell Terrier, Jackie.

He is also survived by four siblings: brothers Joe (Robin) and Rick (Virginia), sisters Laura (Chuck) and Lois. He is also remembered by his loving nieces, nephews, extended family, and many friends. He especially enjoyed the holidays and spending time with his family and friends. He was a kind, generous, thoughtful man-with an amazing sense of humor!

Larry worked for the Ford Motor Company for more than 30 years. He was self-employed as a mobile computer repair specialist for the last 10 years. However, his greatest passion in life, besides his family, was serving his community.

Larry had a strong sense of civic duty. He served on the boards of the Downey Historical Society and the Aerospace Legacy Foundation. As Downey's resident historian, he spoke publically to many civic groups and schools about Downey's historical significance. He is the author of Images of America: Downey, a book about the history of Downey. He has also worked on many special projects for the City of Downey.

He had many interests including history, computers, photography, golf, hiking, music, nature, gardening, and Angels baseball.

A Facebook group has been set up for anyone who wants to share stories about Larry and how he touched their lives. If you would like to share a special memory, please do so on the Larry Latimer Memorial Page on Facebook.

Father John Higgins had read the Beatitudes from The Sermon on the Mount, appropriate because beatitude comes from the same root word as Beatrice, both meaning blessed.

Then, on the patio, husband Jim Romano and family released a cageful of white doves, who flew out and upward in a V formation, till they disappeared against the blue cloud-laced sky. A beautiful way of expressing a final goodbye and of letting go. Actually white homing pigeons, they will return home where they will be rewarded with fresh water and food.

Bea was born Beatrice Platt in Johnston, Pennsylvania and when she was seven, the family moved to Maywood. "We grew up together in Maywood,' said Kathie Blackburn, a childhood friend who remembered Bea fondly, "a little square place bounded on all four sides by railroad tracks."

Bea came to Downey in 1968, when at 19 she married Jim. Here she raised her family.

Almost 20 years ago Bea learned to play an old-fashioned musical instrument, the hammered dulcimer, and the music scene in Downey has never been the same since. "Dulcimer" originally just meant sweet-sounding lyre, but a hammered dulcimer is a percussion-stringed instrument with strings stretched over a trapezoidal resonant sound board, played with mallets. A rich, full sound and unique energy are produced by the mallets hammering the strings.

As soon as Bea was proficient, she, husband Jim on guitar, Marianne Scanlon also on dulcimer and Jim Cope on fiddle, formed the group, When Pigs Fly, a name that can suggest an impossibility come true. They delighted audiences with sweet Celtic aires, Irish melodies, historical selections from Early Americana, jigs, reels, sea chanties, folk, bluegrass, Appalachian and cowboy songs.

Bea enjoyed sharing her knowledge of these arcane sounds in educational musical programs for clubs, organizations and libraries. I remember her soloing at a Friends of the Downey Library luncheon, smiling and explaining Bea's group played everywhere, at parties, in homes, at work, at restaurants like the Mambo Grill, the Hollydale Library, for weddings and anniversaries, art walks, in beer and wine gardens, museums, festivals. Under the management of Celticana, they also produced a CD of their songs.

"My next mission," Bea said, "is to work with the city to bring more music to restaurants and businesses and events in Downey."

One remarkable project that Bea managed to achieve was Make Music Downey, a free all-day music festival similar to music festivals in New York and Paris. The purpose was to make downtown Downey vibrate from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. with the sounds of music of various genres from six different sites, like the lawn of the First Presbyterian Church, the Epic Lounge and Stay Gallery. The First Baptist Church and Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church helped by providing parking and lawn canonies

"Bea and I partnered on the event," said co-organizer Carol Kearns, "which seems crazy as I look back. It involved hundreds of people and wouldn't have happened without her."

"After hearing about the annual free, public music festival, Make Music New York," said Carol, "Bea and I decided to try this in Downey in 2013. It worked just well enough that Bea and I did it again the next year, partnering with the City's Bicycle Ride. We were two idealistic ladies lucky enough to have husbands who supported us. I still can't believe we pulled it off."

In 2012, as poetry curator for the Downey Arts Coalition, I asked Bea to help inaugurate the monthly poetry reading series, Poetry Matters, that went on for a six-year run. Bea and company entertained at Mari's Wine Bar for an hour while poets gathered and admired her skill. When Pigs Fly also played at one of my own birthday parties, a great treat.

Always wanting to give more, Bea founded the Downey Folk

Bea Romano, an advocate for music appreciation in Downey, died July 22.

Music Jam. Now, dulcimer jam is not a delicacy, to spread on toast. It's a rollicking musical happening, as classical music lovers Joyce Sherwin and I remember with pleasure, after attending a dulcimer jam session in Bea's home.

Bea founded the Southern California Dulcimer Heritage, and started the Downey Autoharp Circle, where six players met weekly to learn new skills. Adopting Lady Fingers as their name, they played at the Rancho Los Amigos Foundation Christmas boutique and in convalescent homes.

"She had a zest for life," Carol said, "and was always doing something, volunteering somewhere. In so many ways, she made the world a better place."

"We mourn the passing of a community pillar," said the Downey Arts Coalition.
"Our thoughts and prayers are with Bea's family." Founding members of DAC like Andrew Wahlquist, Alistair Hunter, Roy Anthony Shabla and Frank Kearns expressed their sense of loss, as did many more.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge in his magical poem Kublai Khan, gives us one of literature's most unforgettable images, "the damsel with a dulcimer, in a vision once I saw."

We will remember Bea Romano, "her symphony and song," her dulcimer and her grace.

Most everyone used to have a friend in the car business. Someone you could trust to give you the straight scoop and a great deal. Now that most car dealerships are owned by mega corporations, it's harder to do business with the local dealer who will make your car buying experience a breeze. My Dad started selling cars in the Crenshaw district in the mid-50's and now we're managing a three- generation car business with 9 dealerships from South Bay to Laguna Beach. We have succeeded all these years by putting our customers first, and that is how we will continue to earn and keep your business. Plus, we support the local schools and charities in our neighborhoods because that's the right thing to do. Visit any of our 9 dealerships and be prepared to do business with a friend. It will be a surprisingly refreshing throw back to a simpler time.

Good men with guns won't protect us

BY FROMA HARROP

It was a remarkable 13 hours in American history. A mass shooting in Dayton, Ohio, taking nine lives was overshadowed by a massacre in El Paso, Texas, costing 21.

Others are dwelling on the El Paso gunman's alleged online "manifesto" about Hispanics' growing political clout in Texas — and Donald Trump's use of code words appearing to validate the frothing. But here let's discuss the guns themselves.

Even the Trump-loving New York Post is now calling for a ban on assault weapons, as demands for gun control have swelled. This puts the National Rifle Association, bankrolled by makers of these killing machines, under new pressure. Expect to hear the usual arguments.

Only one of them is semi-respectable. That is, the way to stop a bad man with a gun is to have a good man with a gun take him down. With guns already flooding America, one can't totally dismiss this logic

Except it doesn't work in practice. There is almost never such a person on the scene, even in Texas. In nearly all cases, the good men with guns are members of law enforcement who rush to the scene. Police in Dayton reached the suspect in less than a minute, but by then he had already killed nine people.

Some insist that customers at the Walmart in El Paso should have been armed. Really? Has America reached a stage where Saturday shoppers looking for towels are thought careless for not keeping a gun in their handbag?

The NRA pushes the myth that Stephen Willeford, a good man with a gun, somehow stopped a deadly rampage in Sutherland Springs, Texas. Except he didn't. Willeford confronted the attacker after he had fatally shot worshippers at the First Baptist Church. Was the killer prevented from continuing his rampage elsewhere? Perhaps. But 26 churchgoers dead was hardly a victory.

The theory also operates on the assumption that the good man can shoot straight and keep his cool when confronted with a totally chaotic scene of carnage. Even well-trained members of the military sometimes hit innocents. And note the instances in which even armed professional guards were afraid to rush in on a maniac.

In the Las Vegas massacre, the worst mass shooting in U.S. history, the targets at a country music concert could not have fought back, even if they had been armed to the teeth. The gunman was holed up on the 32nd floor of a nearby hotel with 23 guns, including 12 assault weapons, by his side. It took a SWAT team to break into the room, and by then, 58 were fatally shot.

Laws that would keep guns away from the mentally ill and ban weapons of war (let experts designate them) are, of course, essential. They would not infringe on hunters' activities and could leave plenty of options for those who want firearms for self-defense

Barring major changes, there is no reason to believe that these tragedies won't continue. Every mass shooting makes the act seem more normal in the minds of evil and/or unhinged individuals. Social media has created a community of the perverted, sharing their twisted "manifestos" and praising perpetrators of outrageous deeds.

Deranged weaklings will continue to think that it's manly to shoot unarmed adults and children in the back. The maker of the AR-15-style weapon used in the massacre of 20 elementary school children and six adults in Newtown, Connecticut, marketed its products with lines like "Consider your man card reissued."

The mentally ill will always be with us (and they're in every country). As far as personal safety is concerned, I'd much prefer a psychotic man without a gun to a good man with one.

Reaction to last weekend's mass shootings

President Trump: Good morning. My fellow Americans, this morning, our nation is overcome with shock, horror, and sorrow. This weekend, more than 80 people were killed or wounded in two evil attacks

On Saturday morning, in El Paso, Texas, a wicked man went to a Walmart store, where families were shopping with their loved ones. He shot and murdered 20 people, and injured 26 others, including precious little children.

Then, in the early hours of Sunday morning in Dayton, Ohio, another twisted monster opened fire on a crowded downtown street. He murdered 9 people, including his own sister, and injured 27 others.

The First Lady and I join all Americans in praying and grieving for the victims, their families, and the survivors. We will stand by their side forever. We will never forget.

These barbaric slaughters are an assault upon our communities, an attack upon our nation, and a crime against all of humanity. We are outraged and sickened by this monstrous evil, the cruelty, the hatred, the malice, the bloodshed, and the terror. Our hearts are shattered for every family whose parents, children, husbands, and wives were ripped from their arms and their lives. America weeps for the fallen.

We are a loving nation, and our children are entitled to grow up in a just, peaceful, and loving society. Together, we lock arms to shoulder the grief, we ask God in Heaven to ease the anguish of those who suffer, and we vow to act with urgent resolve.

I want to thank the many law enforcement personnel who responded to these atrocities with the extraordinary grace and courage of American heroes.

I have spoken with Texas Governor Greg Abbott and Ohio Governor Mike DeWine, as well as Mayor Dee Margo of El Paso, Texas, and Mayor Nan Whaley of Dayton, Ohio, to express our profound sadness and unfailing support.

Today, we also send the condolences of our nation to President Obrador of Mexico, and all the people of Mexico, for the loss of their citizens in the El Paso shooting. Terrible, terrible thing.

I have also been in close contact with Attorney General Barr and FBI Director Wray. Federal authorities are on the ground, and I have directed them to provide any and all assistance required — whatever is needed.

The shooter in El Paso posted a manifesto online consumed by racist hate. In one voice, our nation must condemn racism, bigotry, and white supremacy. These sinister ideologies must be defeated. Hate has no place in America. Hatred warps the mind, ravages the heart, and devours the soul. We have asked the FBI to identify all further resources they need to investigate and disrupt hate crimes and domestic terrorism — whatever they need.

We must recognize that the Internet has provided a dangerous avenue to radicalize disturbed minds and perform demented acts. We must shine light on the dark recesses of the Internet, and stop mass murders before they start. The Internet, likewise, is used for human trafficking, illegal drug distribution, and so many other heinous crimes. The perils of the Internet and social media cannot be ignored, and they will not be ignored.

In the two decades since Columbine, our nation has watched with rising horror and dread as one mass shooting has followed another — over and over again, decade after decade.

We cannot allow ourselves to feel powerless. We can and will stop this evil contagion. In that task, we must honor the sacred memory of those we have lost by acting as one people. Open wounds cannot heal if we are divided. We must seek real, bipartisan solutions. We have to do that in a bipartisan manner. That will truly make America safer and better for all.

First, we must do a better job of identifying and acting on early warning signs. I am directing the Department of Justice to work in partisan — partnership with local, state, and federal agencies, as well as social media companies, to develop tools that can detect mass shooters before they strike.

As an example, the monster in the Parkland high school in Florida had many red flags against him, and yet nobody took decisive action. Nobody did anything. Why not?

Second, we must stop the glorification of violence in our society. This includes the gruesome and grisly video games that are now commonplace. It is too easy today for troubled youth to surround themselves with a culture that celebrates violence. We must stop or substantially reduce this, and it has to begin immediately. Cultural change is hard, but each of us can choose to build a culture that celebrates the inherent worth and dignity of every human life. That's what we have to do.

Third, we must reform our mental health laws to better identify mentally disturbed individuals who may commit acts of violence and make sure those people not only get treatment, but, when necessary, involuntary confinement. Mental illness and hatred pulls the trigger, not the gun.

Fourth, we must make sure that those judged to pose a grave risk to public safety do not have access to firearms, and that, if they do, those firearms can be taken through rapid due process. That is why I have called for red flag laws, also known as extreme risk protection orders.

Today, I am also directing the Department of Justice to propose legislation ensuring that those who commit hate crimes and mass murders face the death penalty, and that this capital punishment be delivered quickly, decisively, and without years of needless delay.

These are just a few of the areas of cooperation that we can pursue. I am open and ready to listen and discuss all ideas that will actually work and make a very big difference.

Republicans and Democrats have proven that we can join together in a bipartisan fashion to address this plague. Last year, we enacted the STOP School Violence and Fix NICS Acts into law, providing grants to improve school safety and strengthening critical background checks for firearm purchases. At my direction, the Department of Justice banned bump stocks. Last year, we prosecuted a record number of firearms offenses. But there is so much more that we have to do.

Now is the time to set destructive partisanship aside — so destructive — and find the courage to answer hatred with unity, devotion, and love. Our future is in our control. America will rise to the challenge. We will always have and we always will win. The choice is ours and ours alone. It is not up to mentally ill monsters; it is up to us.

If we are able to pass great legislation after all of these years, we will ensure that those who were attacked will not have died in vain.

May God bless the memory of those who perished in Toledo. May God protect them. May God protect all of those from Texas to Ohio. May God bless the victims and their families. May God bless America.

Thank you very much. Thank you.

Former President Barack Obama: Michelle and I grieve with all the families in El Paso and Dayton who endured these latest mass shootings. Even if details are still emerging, there are a few things we already know to be true.

First, no other nation on Earth comes close to experiencing the frequency of mass shootings that we see in the United States. No other developed nation tolerates the levels of gun violence that we do. Every time this happens, we're told that tougher gun laws won't stop all murders; that they won't stop every deranged individual from getting a weapon and shooting innocent people in public places. But the evidence shows that they can stop some killings. They can save some families from heartbreak. We are not helpless here. And until all of us stand up and insist on holding public officials accountable for changing our gun laws, these tragedies will keep happening.

Second, while the motivations behind these shootings may not yet be fully known, there are indications that the El Paso shooting follows a dangerous trend: troubled individuals who embrace racist ideologies and see themselves obligated to act violently to preserve white supremacy. Like the followers of ISIS and other foreign terrorist organizations, these individuals may act alone, but they've been radicalized by white nationalist websites that proliferate on the internet. That means that both law enforcement agencies and internet platforms need to come up with better strategies to reduce the influence of these hate groups.

But just as important, all of us have to send a clarion call and behave with the values of tolerance and diversity that should be the hallmark of our democracy. We should soundly reject language coming out of the mouths of any of our leaders that feeds a climate of fear and hatred or normalizes racist sentiments; leaders who demonize those who don't look like us, or suggest that other people, including immigrants, threaten our way of life, or refer to other people as sub-human, or imply that America belongs to just one certain type of people. Such language isn't new — it's been at the root of most human tragedy throughout history, here in America and around the world. It is at the root of slavery and Jim Crow, the Holocaust, the genocide in Rwanda and ethnic cleansing in the Balkans. It has no place in our politics and our public life. And it's time for the overwhelming majority of Americans of goodwill, of every race and faith and political party, to say as much — clearly and unequivocally.

U.S. Sen. Kamala Harris: Assault weapons are weapons of war. They are designed to kill a lot of people quickly. There is no reason they should exist on the streets of a civil society.

Beto O'Rourke: 22 in El Paso this week. Nearly 40,000 in our country each year. The numbers are heartbreaking, but they don't capture the tragedy of each & every one of those deaths. That's why I am sharing the stories of all those who lost their lives in El Paso this weekend.

Jordan Anchondo. 24 years-old. She went to Walmart to buy school supplies—and decorations for her daughter's 6th birthday party. When the gunman entered, she shielded her 2-month-old son. Jordan didn't make it, but her son did.

Andre Anchondo. Jordan's husband. 23 years-old. They married last year. He'd just finished building their family a home. Saturday was going to be the first time family & friends would see it. But he, too, was killed—while shielding his wife, who was shielding their

Javier Rodríguez. 15. I'll say it again: 15 years-old. A student ready to start his sophomore year, a soccer player ready to start another season. His whole life ahead of him. His sister says she "lost my everything, my best friend."

His classmates organized a vigil for him. No student should ever have to do that. I met two of them while in line to donate blood, and they invited me out. Seeing the entire school community come out to that football field gave me hope. This generation will end this epidemic.

David Johnson. 63 years-old. When hatred entered Walmart on Saturday morning, David responded by protecting his wife and his 9 year-old granddaughter. He passed away, but they survived.

Jorge Calvillo García. At 61 years-old, Jorge passed away this weekend while protecting his granddaughter. He was from Torreón, Mexico. His son, Luis Calvillo, was shot as well. They were outside of Walmart on Saturday, raising funds for EP Fusion, a local girls' soccer team.

María Eugenia Legarreta Rothe. 58 years-old. María is from Chihuahua, Mexico—and was only here so she could be at the El Paso airport when her daughter arrived.

Teresa Sanchez. At 82 years-old, Teresa bore the brunt of evil on Saturday. She was from Mexico as well.

Luis Alfonzo Juárez. 90 years-old. His wife, who he'd been married to for almost 70 years, was also a victim of Saturday's shooting. He didn't make it—but thankfully, she did. I was able to meet their family at the hospital, and they're showing this community's strength.

Gloria Irma Márquez. A mother of four and a grandmother, Gloria was from Juárez—part of our binational community. She lost her life at 61 years-old because our country failed to protect her.

Iván Manzano. Like Gloria, Iván was from Juárez, where so many of our neighbors live. He was 46 years-old when he lost his life in our country.

Elsa Mendoza Márquez. 57 years-old. Elsa lived across the border in Juárez, where she was a teacher. When she ran into Walmart to buy supplies for her students in Juárez, her husband and son waited outside in the car. They survived the shooting. Tragically, she did Sara Esther Regalado. 66 years-old. Adolfo Cerros Hernández. 68 years-old. They, too, were from Mexico—and are remembered as being loving parents. "I don't know how long it will take for my soul to heal," their daughter wrote.

Alexander Gerhard Hoffman. Alexander also wasn't from the United States. He was from Germany—but he lost his life visiting our country at 66 years-old.

Maria Flores and Raúl Flores. The couple went to Walmart on Saturday morning and never came home. They were 77 years-old. Both of them.

Angie Silva Englisbee. 86 years-old. This wasn't the first time Angie experienced tragedy. Her husband died at 38 years-old, leaving her to raise seven kids by herself. Her grandson called her "the hero of our family." She, too, was killed.

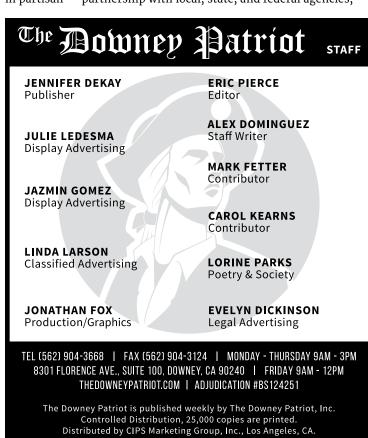

Leo Campos. 41 years-old. Maribel Hernandez. 56 years-old. They went to Walmart after leaving their dog to be groomed. When Maribel's brother heard they never came to pick him up, he feared the worst. Soon, it was confirmed: Leo and Maribel had both lost their lives.

Margie Reckard. 63 years-old. "I'm like a puppy run away from its momma," said Antonio Basco, her husband of 22 years. "But my wife, she'd say, 'Get up off your rear end.'" He continued: "I know she's looking down and she's smiling."

Juan de Dios Velázquez Chairez. Juan and his wife, Nicholasa, shopped together every week. Juan was from Zacatecas, Mexico, but had lived in our city for two years. Nicholasa was injured in the shooting. Juan lost his life at 77 years-old.

Thank you to El Paso Times, KVIA, KTSM, BuzzFeed, Washington Post, and so many other news organizations for doing the important work of bringing a human face to all those who lost their lives this weekend.

This is who we lost on Saturday. Many more are injured. These are the human beings who will never be with us again. And there are so many people like them, who die because of gun violence every year. We have the power to end this crisis. And we don't have time to wait.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

ummer is upon us, and it has been sunny and hot. Despite my own fair complexion, I love Southern California and I love the outdoors. We all need to protect ourselves from the sun's harmful rays. For those of us who, as I do, insist on spending time outside, one of the key options for avoiding sun damage is the liberal and frequent use of sunscreen. There is new information regarding its safety and use.

I am often asked what the best exercise is. The answer is, of course, that the best exercise is the one that we are willing to do. The same is true for sunscreen! While sunscreens are not all equal, the best one is the one that we will use generously and correctly. However, there are significant differences between them.

What is a broad-spectrum sunscreen? We need protection against two types of ultraviolet light, UVA and UVB, and a broad-spectrum sunscreen protects us from both. UVA rays prematurely age the skin, causing wrinkling and age spots. UVB rays burn the skin. Too much exposure to either type of light can cause skin cancer.

What is SPF, and how much do we need? SPF stands for sun protection factor, and is a measure of how well the sunscreen protects against UVB rays (UVA protection is not rated). Manufacturers calculate SPF based on how long it takes to burn skin treated with the sunscreen as compared to without. The recommendation is to use one with an SPF of at least 30. Once the SPF exceeds 50, there is only a small increase in UV protection. Regardless of the number, sunscreen lasts the same amount of time on the skin.

Keep in mind that even when applied well, sunscreen will wash off during swimming or sweating, and leave us unprotected. Sunscreen must be water resistant if we plan to be in the water. "Water resistant" means that the SPF is maintained for up to 40 minutes in water. If it states "very water resistant," then the SPF will be maintained for up to 80 minutes in water.

How do the ingredients of sunscreens vary? Sunscreens contain filters that reflect or absorb UV rays. The two main types of filters are organic and inorganic. Organic filters absorb UV radiation and convert it to a small amount of heat, and include cinnamates, salicylates and benzophenones. Inorganic filters reflect and scatter UV radiation, and include titanium dioxide and zinc oxide.

The most recent FDA guidelines now generally recognize sunscreens as safe and effective (GRASE) that use two inorganic sunblocking ingredients: titanium dioxide and zinc oxide. However, chemicals in some sunscreens with organic filters are absorbed into the body at levels high enough to raise concerns about potentially toxic effects. Bloodstream levels of oxybenzone, avobenzone, octocrylene and ecamsule increased dramatically for four days after use. At this time, the FDA recommends that we avoid sunscreen with oxybenzone.

Sunscreens come in different styles. Creams tend to be best for dry skin, while lotions are often thinner and less greasy, and preferred on larger areas. Gels work well in hairy places, like the scalp or chest. Sticks are useful when applying around the eyes. Sprays may be easier to apply on children, but never spray near the face.

Consider these suggestions:

Whenever possible, the first line of defense is to avoid sun exposure. Consider staying out of the sun at peak hours; typically between 10 am and 4 pm. Water, snow, and concrete reflect light and increase the risk of sunburn. Wear protective clothing, including pants, shirts with long sleeves, sunglasses, and hat.

- ► Use sunscreen on all exposed skin surfaces, including scalp, feet, and lips.
- ► UV rays pass through clouds, so use sunscreen even when it is cloudy.
- ► Apply generous amounts of sunscreen to dry skin, 15 minutes before exposure.
  - ► Reapply sunscreen every two hours.
  - ► Keep an eye on the expiration date.
- ► Children under the age of six months should not use sunscreen. Keep them out of the sun.

Regardless of issues surrounding the safety of a sunscreen's particular ingredients, the evidence for using it – vs. NOT using it – is overwhelmingly positive. The benefits of avoiding sun damage significantly outweigh any possible risks. I urge you to use sunscreen generously, and often!

State mandating disclosure of toxic water

Water systems will now have to notify consumers of any chemicals present in their water supply.

BELL GARDENS — Legislation that will require public water systems to notify consumers of the presence of toxic fluorinated chemical compounds was signed last week by Governor Gavin Newsom.

The bill, AB 756, introduced by Assemblywoman Cristina Garcia (D-Bell Gardens), would require all public water systems to monitor the class of per and polyfluoroakyl substance (PFAS) chemicals and subsequently inform the public of results.

"This is another step towards environmental justice in communities like mine that have been treated as wastelands," said Garcia. "California now leads the nation by requiring reporting to consumers of these 'forever chemicals' in our public water systems. I'm very happy that the Governor see's communities like mine and is joining my effort to empower them with regulation and information so they can make informed health decisions."

PFAS chemicals are good at repelling oil and water. That makes them useful in a lot of products including non-stick cookware, fast food wrappers, pizza boxes, water-repellent fabrics and fire-fighting foam. Manufacturers have agreed to stop using two forms of PFAS in the U.S. These chemicals are known as 'forever chemicals' because they are resistant to breaking down naturally in the environment.

"Given California's abundance of industrial production, particularly in my district of South East Los Angeles, it's past time we're monitoring these substances in our water supplies," added Garcia. "We're being poisoned at the tap. The little, outdated data we do have is alarming. But we know it's only the tip of the iceberg and that's frightening. "

California has the most known detections of toxic PFAS chemicals in drinking water sources at 455 and it's expected more will be found through this legislation. California is far behind other states, such as New York, Vermont, Minnesota, and New Jersey in investigating water contamination.

The Environmental

Working Group compiled a map of contamination location throughout the nation. A cluster of contaminated sites are located within the 58th Assembly District. While there is some data available, it's unknown how severe or widespread the contamination exists. In addition, no public health goal or maximum contaminant level for PFAS chemicals has been established. Interim notification levels have been adopted, however, reporting and notification while recommended, are not required by law until now.

Assembly Bill 756 will require water systems to provide notifications to consumers on the class PFAS that show up in their systems. The measure will also update and expand notification requirements so that in the event a water system detects levels of PFAS that exceed notification levels, or any other level that may be established in the future, water customers can be notified in an efficient and effective manner thereby streamlining the process. Giving this information to customers is vital so that individuals can make educated decision about if and how they use

"The industrial legacy of pollution and man-made environmental disasters in my district alone—and disproportionately in other communities of color and low socioeconomic status—is frightening," said Garcia. "Getting this data is a first step. Next we need to really understand the scope of the problem and find ways to pay for the clean-up of our water supplies."

Church hosting ice cream social

DOWNEY — Downey United Methodist Church is inviting the community to a free ice cream social this Saturday, Aug. 10, from 6:30-7:30 p.m. in Fellowship Hall.

The church will also be blessing backpacks on Sunday, Aug. 11, during its Sunday worship service at 10:30 a.m.

Downey United Methodist Church is located at 10801 Downey Ave.

Police step up enforcement to protect bicyclists, pedestrians

DOWNEY — The Downey Police Department is participating in a bicycle and pedestrian safety operation this weekend aimed at educating bicyclists, drivers and pedestrians on traffic laws, rules and responsibilities.

Police officers will be looking for drivers speeding, making illegal turns, failing to yield to pedestrians in crosswalks, failing to stop for signs and signals, and other violations.

Officers also will be looking for pedestrians who cross the street illegally or fail to yield to drivers who have the right of way.

Bicyclists will be stopped when riding on the wrong side of the road, not complying with stop signs and signals, or other violations of the same traffic laws that apply to them as drivers.

In 2018, the Downey Police Department investigated three fatal collisions involving bicyclists and pedestrians. An additional 70 were injured.

Downey's Alan Trejo finding his bat with Hartford Yard Goats

By Gerald Nelson Special to the Downey Patriot month the MLB draft took place. More than 1,200 draftees looked to be called and only about 900 will get drafted and sign contracts with hopes that it will lead them to the major leagues.

Unfortunately, more than 700 of those players will never get the chance to fulfill their dream. Especially the later you fall in the draft, the smaller your window of opportunity is.

But do not tell that to Downey's own Alan Trejo. Alan Ray Trejo was born May 30, 1996, in Los Angeles. Son of Ray and Elsa Trejo, he played four seasons of varsity baseball at Warren High School where he played shortstop and pitched.

He was a three-time all-CIF Division 3 first-team honoree after earning second-team all-CIF honors as a freshman. As a senior Trejo compiled a record of 11-0 on the mound while hitting .453. He won the San Gabriel Valley League Pitcher of the Year.

The Colorado Rockies took the infielder in the 16th round of the 2017 draft out of San Diego State. In April of 2019 he was assigned to the Rockies' Double-A team the Hartford Yard Goats after spending 2018 playing for the Class A Lancaster JetHawks which he hit .278/.329/.425 along with 10 home runs in 114 games.

Trejo still has a road ahead of him but if he keeps developing the way he has, he could achieve his ultimate goal.

Writers, like Baseball
Writers' Association of America
member and longtime Colorado Rockies' writer Jack Etkin, have wondered how a player like Trejo, who prospered enough to skip a level last year to jump into Double-A in 2019, slid all the way down to the 16th round in the 2017 draft. He is known for his defensive skills, playmaking ability and leadership but had a lot of questions about his offense.

Yard Goat's Farm director Zach Wilson spoke about that, saying "he didn't come here as a hitter. And I think that's probably what held him back from being a higher pick."

So far this season, Trejo has silenced the doubters with each at bat. For a guy who is not a hitter he is tied for first in home runs, second in RBI's and second in hits on the team.

For him, the stats are not a surprise as he honed his batting skills this offseason.

"All the offseason stuff
I've been doing has been to get stronger, hit the ball a little harder, and focus on certain pitches and certain counts to drive the ball more. This league is a pitcher's league so you have to be more selective.," says Trejo. "But no, this is not a surprise to me. The people that know how hard I work know this is not a surprise."

The Eastern league, which the Yard Goats play in, is known for being a difficult hitting environment so it speaks to Trejo's development even more.

Even though Downey is 2,890 miles from Hartford, CT he does not forget where he came from and credits his hometown for playing a part in where he is today. Skepticism of Trejo's abilities started even before the MLB draft.

"My community pushed me. A lot of people in my community felt that I was never good enough. I never got the respect I should have gotten," Trejo said. "Because of that it has always been a grind for me wherever I was. They've pushed me more than anything and it has a positive impact on me believe it or not. A lot of things that happened in my childhood was negative but it is what it is. I've grown from it and learned Trejo's production on the team has given him more of a leadership role. In such an individual sport he takes pride in leading by example.

"I try to come to the field everyday with the same expectations to win games and not be selfish," he mentions. "A lot of the time we get caught up in trying to get our hits or playing defense. We get caught up in ourselves instead of our team. Growing up watching guys like Derek Jeter and A-Rod (Alex Rodgriguez), you see their leadership skills and how their teammates talk about them

it makes you want to be like prospects, just yet. But he has great feel for the infield at Couple that with his leadership and his progression at the plate, Downey might be able to claim one of their own as a future player in MLB.

Debut loss doesn't deter amateur boxer Ray Gonzalez

By Mark Fetter Sportswriter

DOWNEY — Ray Gonzalez of M.V.P. Family Practice and Sports Medicine competed in his first amateur boxing match last Saturday night at the Ontario Convention Center.

Gonzalez, age 50, lost by decision but had "an amazing experience." Gonzalez, despite the setback, said "it was a great fight and I learned from the experience."

The first round was even after your typical "feeling out your opponent start." Gonzalez took the second round when he rocked his opponent with a straight right hand. Gonzalez's opponent took the third round with a late flurry that led to a standing eight count. The standing eight count proved to be the difference in the fight.

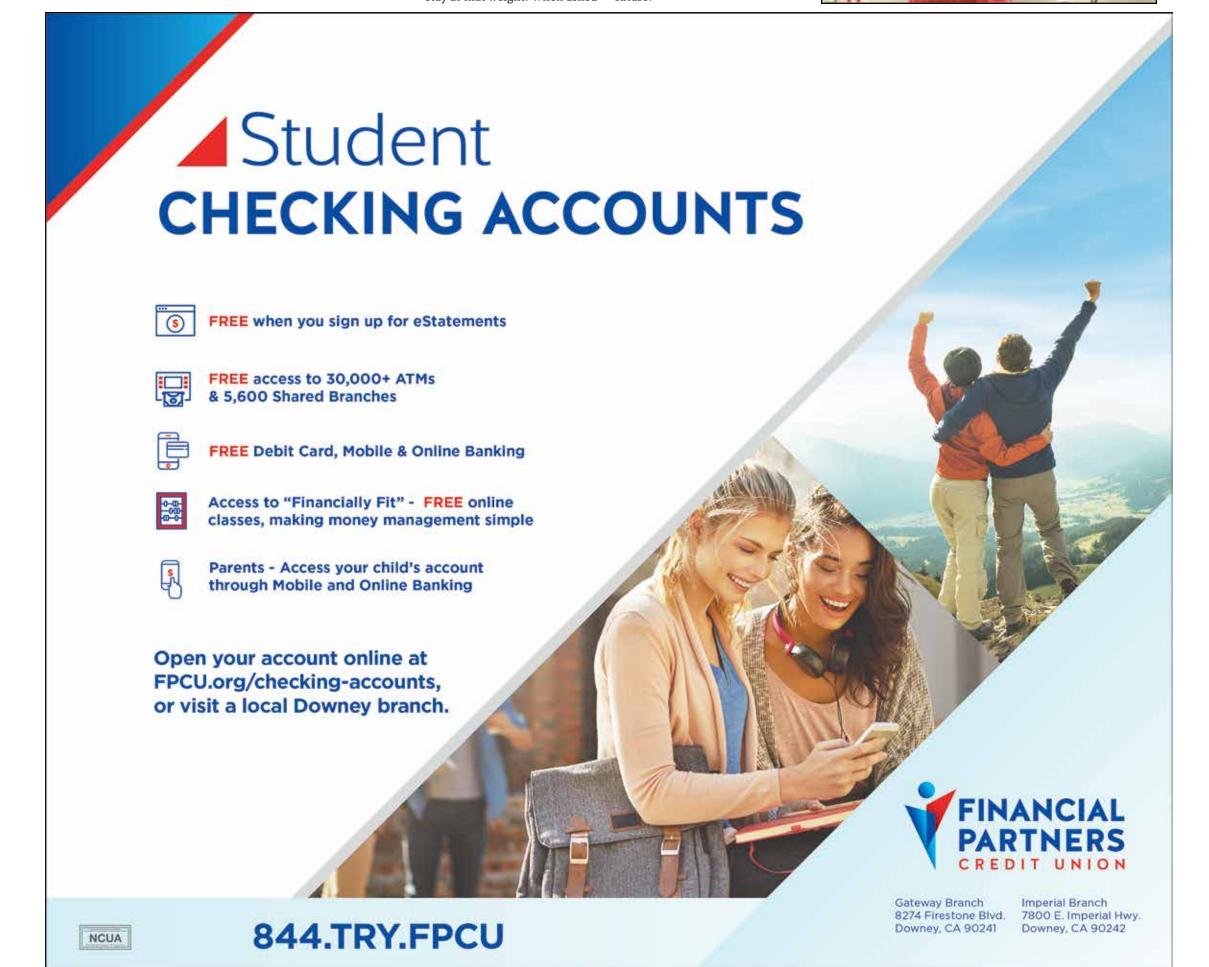

With the setback, Gonzalez was eliminated from the tournament and has no future fight date set at this time.

Gonzalez's opponent was 59 years old and extremely fit.
He was a southpaw who stood six feet tall and had the reach advantage. It was his opponent's amateur debut as well but has worked as one of the boxing instructors at Wildcard Boxing Gym in Los Angeles for the last eight years.

Gonzalez felt good at 165 pounds and will most likely stay at that weight. When asked to critique his performance, Gonzalez said that "he needed to do more cardio work, more road running to help in the later part of the rounds." Gonzalez believes this is "an essential part of the training program for any boxer" and will remember that moving forward.

As a side note, I think Ray Gonzalez's experience is awesome and I take my hat off to his effort and competitive spirit. Nice job Doc and good luck in the future.

Shared Stories

By Sharon Benson Smith Contributor

Ray and I were separated. The boys, Steve and Mark, and I, were living with Mom and Dad in La Mirada. I was driving from there to Firestone Tire & Rubber Company in South Gate. The commute became a bit much, so I began looking for a place for us that would be closer to my job. I found a cute one-bedroom upstairs apartment in Lynwood which was just a few miles from

The next problem I had was finding a sitter for Steve and Mark. As luck would have it, Mrs. Kozick was just down the street from our apartment and that seemed like an ideal situation. She was very strict and stern, but I sensed that the boys would be well-fed and safe in her care. Mark was 2 years old and Steve was nearly 7.

Things went very well for quite a while, until one day when I picked them up after work and Steve told me that Mrs. Kozick (he called her "The Sarge") had spanked Mark. When I questioned her about it, she told me that Mark had messed his pants. I wasn't pleased with that and knew I had to find another sitter. Meantime, I called Mom and told her what had happened. I'll never forget her saying, "I'd like to wring the Sarge's neck." That was so unlike Mom, but hey, "The Sarge" was messing with her grandson!

Not long after that, the

Double the Fun

By Helen Hampton Contributor

Much of my pleasure in life over the last 45 years has come from my identical twin daughters, Joy and Jan.

They looked so much alike the day I brought them home from the hospital, I had to paint Jan's fingernail red to avoid mixing the two of them up. After all, I didn't want to make the mistake of feeding one once, while the other was left hungry.

Throughout their lives my twins looked so much alike that people have always had trouble telling them apart. This enabled them to play tricks on people.

Once when they were in second grade, they switched classes on April Fool's Day. Jan had to take a spelling test for Joy, and Joy was mad at Jan for missing a word that Joy knew how to spell.

Once when my twins were 14 years old, Joy did what so many other people had done to the twins all of their lives: she mixed the two of them up. But how is it possible that one twin could get herself mixed up with the other twin? It happened like this:

One day I had taken my twins shopping at the May Company. On this day, as on every other day since their birth, they were dressed alike. They were adorable in beautiful long, white dresses and large floppybrimmed hats.

I left the two of them to shop for clothes while I went to another part of the store. They somehow became separated and Joy wandered the store looking for Jan.

Finally, as Joy stepped off the escalator, she saw Jan out of the corner of her eye, in the distance off to the left. She waved as Jan waved back at her.

Relieved to have found her twin, Joy hurried over to where Jan was standing -- and found herself looking into a mirror between two racks of clothing.

front of us said she would watch the boys. She had a son between the ages of Steve and Mark. Again, this was a convenient situation for me. She was a very kind, caring and responsible lady and I was fortunate to have her watching my boys.

One day while they were out and about in the car and Mark was in the back seat, Mrs. Storm had to make a quick stop and Mark fell forward, hitting his mouth on the metal floor divider. I was called and left work; he was in the emergency room at St. Francis Hospital, and they needed my signature before they could proceed with the needed minor plastic surgery (it wasn't minor to me, it was major).

Of course, I raced to get there, and found that his upper lip had been completely split open from beneath his little nose. To this day, he has a bump under his top lip and a fine line or scar that spans from the top of his lip to the corner of the right side of his mouth.

It was a heart breaker to see my little guy in pain and having stitches. I guess I was just grateful that it wasn't worse (something mom always said in similar circumstances when it was one of her six)

Another incident while we lived there was that we frequented the neighborhood mom-and-pop store "Charlie's Market." There was a short cut to get there so we didn't have to take the busy boulevard. Mark was probably three or four years old by then. It was just a short distance, and it was very familiar to them and I knew they would

So, I sent them to buy milk or bread. (Nothing even close to that would be safe in today's society...what a shame). Anyway, I forget now what it was but Mark came home with woman who lived in the house in something that hadn't been paid for. The three of us immediately returned and I paid for whatever it was that Mark had taken. I just knew it was important to have them with me when I explained the situation and paid

> Taking another jump back in time, Mark had problems with his feet being pigeon toed. I'm guessing that was why I had him checked by the doctor. He ended up having to sleep with his feet in shoes that were attached to a brace that turned his feet outward.

> I hated having to put him through that every night. I knew it was cumbersome and uncomfortable. There were times when he'd shake his little head "no-no" and whimper. And there were times when I would give in to him, but not too often, because I knew it was for his own good.

I had been told by the doctor that it was a common orthopedic condition and that he would outgrow it as he developed better muscle control and coordination. but that the brace would help to speed up the correction. So, I did what I had to do, and the doctor was right. I'm thanking the Man upstairs again.

Ray and I reconciled: he had his real estate license; Tracy was born, and we began house hunting. The year was 1964, and we would soon be leaving our life in Lynwood.

'Idol' winner Ruben Studdard performing in Cerritos

CERRITOS - During his "American Idol" run, Ruben Studdard was hailed as "the next Luther Vandross." See the Grammy nominee pay tribute to Vandross with the late legend's timeless hits, including "Always and Forever" and "Here and Now" at the Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts (CCPA) on Sunday, Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. Tickets start at $40.

Dubbed "The Velvet Teddy Bear" by Billboard, Studdard celebrates the legacy and achievements of the eight-time Grammy-winning R&B guru in "Ruben Sings Luther."

Studdard fills the evening with Vandross' timeless romantic ballads such as "Never Too Much," "A House Is Not a Home," "Power of Love," and "Stop to Love." Variety magazine noted Studdard appropriated much of the late tenor's nuances with "a smooth, deep burr without any real somersaults.'

Studdard became a household name after claiming the title of "American Idol" in 2003. In 2004, he was honored with the NAACP's Image Award for Best New Artist and nominated for the American Music Award for Favorite Male Soul/R&B Artist.

Studdard's first album, "Soulful," earned him a Grammy nod for Best Male R&B Vocal Performance for his rendition of Vandross' single "Superstar.' Studdard's 2004 sophomore album, "I Need an Angel," was selected the No. 1 Gospel Album of the Year by Billboard.

His latest album, the romance-themed "Unconditional Love," features collaborations with Stevie

Wonder, Eric Benet, and Lalah Hathaway. Most recently, Studdard appeared on the Broadway production "Ain't Misbehavin'."

In the 90's, racial divides plagued Los Angeles and Downey

The televised trial became a popular spectacle, and Simpson's legal team argued in front of the American public that the same man who said "I'm not Black, I'm O.J." was discriminated against because of his skin color. It was from this milieu that the corresponding episodes in Downey grew out of.

Ironically, this story begins with a newspaper series on Latinos/as/xs in Downey not unlike my own. In 1985, the Southeast News, by then the remaining local newspaper, ceased production due to a lack of funds. For nearly a decade, Downey residents could only access local news through a subsection of the Los Angeles Times.

However, in 1993, a newspaper printing group started the Downey Eagle to resume local coverage. The Eagle's first editor, John Adams, boldly introduced a column on Mexican Americans in the first issue of the nascent paper. Adams's coverage was neutral and even supportive of the Mexican Americans, calling them "a welcomed addition" who would "benefit or at least maintain the city."

In many ways, Adams's commentary merely continued the white residents' tolerance of Mexican Americans who matched their civic practices. In others, though, the column was newly progressive. Articles like "Some [economic] gains, and more on the way," "Latino Growth: Downey a city facing changes," and "Number of elected Latinos increase in US, Downey,' presented Mexican Americans as social equals to their white counterparts. Adams stressed that "Downey is a middleclass community...and most of the people who come here are business people who can afford to live here." Adams noted the similar interests, such as that "Latinos move to Downey because of the good schools, safe streets, and superior law enforcementthe same reason most Anglos reside here." The city had its own newspaper for the first time in a decade—albeit one where the editor highlighted a source of unease for the white community.

But the 1990s were different times than the 1980s. For one, racial tension permeated throughout metropolitan Los Angeles, as I mentioned above. The white community was equally uneasy for another reason. After the 1988 latent white flight, the remaining whites were generally poorer than their middle-class coethnics who left. In 1990, whites in Downey earned less than whites throughout Los Angeles and Orange Counties by $2,200 and $3,500, respectively; by 2000, the gap widened to $9,000 compared to whites in both counties.

While some whites sold their homes and left, working-class whites stayed in Downey by necessity. Some white residents felt left behind in their communities—not as demographic holdouts, but rather as forgotten remnants of an earlier time in Downey. They were especially perceptive of demographic change and felt trapped. So they turned to the newspapers to voice their concern for the community.

Adams's series drew criticism from both Mexican American and Anglo residents. One Mexican American woman, for example, expressed distaste for being labeled Latina, preferring instead to be referred to as American. Specifically, "she said she was not thought of as a Latina by the Anglo community, and didn't want to be." The woman, who chose to remain anonymous, called the column useless and feared that it would divide the community in two camps based on white or Mexican heritage.

In the same article, she referred to other Latinos/as/xs by the derogatory term "beaners." Her contempt for the series stemmed from a primacy of the civic—and not ethnic—identity. In being a new steward of the community, she chose to associate herself with terms that suggested her similarities to white neighbors—and avoid the stereotypes associated with "Mexican" neighbors.

Some white residents, though, made those exact associations and overestimated the differences between themselves and the middle-class Mexican Americans. Some especially prolific writers took to the op-eds to voice their displeasure with the series (and demographic change in general). Kay Williams was one such writer.

Williams was a retiree who lived in Downey since before its incorporation. By the time Williams began writing in 1994, whites had fallen under fifty percent of the city's population for the first time in its history. Williams's first op-ed spewed racial invective and called attention to the un-assimilability of Mexican Americans. Williams associated Mexican Americans regardless of economic background—with gangs, graffiti, lower school standards, and an imperiled quality of life. Williams maintained that there was no hope for cultural reconciliation or assimilation by the Mexican Americans as "[w]e Anglos are raised, and live by certain standards of life, and certain values of life—and the Latinos do not, and thus the difference, and the conflict!"

Williams's first op-ed then argued for residential self-segregation, mused if the local shopping mall was a part of Mexico, and pondered a ban on the Spanish language. Just as "lions live with lions, tigers with tigers, birds with birds, elephants with elephants. Shouldn't Anglos at least have the option to live with other Anglos if they wish?"

The op-ed flattened and caricatured Mexican Americans, mostly by ignoring class background, differing levels of social capital, generations removed from immigration, and other factors that informed Mexican Americans selfidentities. To Williams, a Mexican American could not and did not want to assimilate to American culture. This was the exact racial stereotype that the assimilationist middle-class Mexican Americans challenged in earlier years by cultivating their civic identity.

Williams held extreme views, but others agreed with the basic premises of the argument.

Many whites exaggerated the un-assimilability of Mexican Americans, especially with references to publicly spoken Spanish. One writer opined: "I just want to say 'kudos' to Kay Williams' letter to the editor of last week. She [sic] spoke out and said what a majority of Americans feel."

Another resident moderated Williams's claims, but agreed with the dangers that a Mexican American community could pose to property values. She gave the example of Huntington Park, which underwent white flight soon after the Watts Riots. This writer reasoned that "Huntington Park was once the white upper middle-class community...and we all know what happened there when Latinos moved in. Many people now residing in Downey fled that city and remember what took place. Do you blame them for being concerned?"

Williams's supporters fed into stereotypes of Mexican American neighbors, despite the civic identity middle-class Mexican Americans portrayed. Whereas similarities in civic profiles created community cohesion in the 1980s, white residents in the early 1990s perceived fundamental differences between themselves and their new neighbors. Few were as extreme as Williams, but many believed in the differences.

A handful of white residents moderated the anti-Mexican rhetoric. Peter Lago wrote to the Eagle to suggest the similarities between the middle-class whites and Mexican Americans in economic makeup, home-owning practices, and especially Judeo-Christian ethics. Lago's Christian ethos emphasized that if members of the white community professed themselves to be Children of God, they would be remiss to espouse the philosophy of bigots" and not "reconcile their actions and thoughts with the tenets of Christianity or Judaism or any other good-faith religion purporting to follow a good and righteous God."

Lago also criticized the proponents of white flight, questioning how anyone could claim to love their community but promptly abandon it. In a sense, Lago more closely resembled the middle-class white community who lived in Downey before demographic change where, so long as their neighbors resembled them as members of the civic community, ethnic differences were marginal concerns. Through all the responses to Adams's editorial, white voices like Lago were few and far between.

MAR. 3 1991

Some Latino/a/x residents responded to Williams with equal vitriol. One Cuban American wrote to second Williams's distaste for bilingual education, but then wrote that Williams was misguided in blaming Latinos/ as/xs for a "societal degradation of values." A Mexican American woman went further and reciprocated Williams's racebased vitriol by claiming that "I have seen many white trash in my 23 years in this country...People like Kay Williams are a disgrace to this community. Ms. [sic] Williams, if you are so unhappy in Downey, move to Iowa, I'll be happy to buy you a one-way ticket out of here!" Comments like these, whether in print or in person, suggested that the racebased divisions of Los Angeles existed in Downey at the time of demographic change.

Doty hopes to repeat as middle school champions

The Knights won last year's Champions Cup Trophy and hope to repeat.

Meanwhile, middle school JV baseball and softball teams have been cut for the 2019-20 school

By Mark Fetter Sportswriter

DOWNEY —The Doty Middle School Athletic Programs have won the Downey Unified School District Champions Cup Trophy for the past six years and look to keep it going during the 2019-20 academic school year.

Last year, there were 29 total city championships up for grabs and Doty claimed 13 of them. Griffiths finished second with 8.5 championships, Stauffer finished third with 4 championships and Sussman finished fourth 3.5 championships.

The first rotation consisted of football and girls' volleyball and there were six championships being competed for. Griffiths won 8th grade football, Stauffer won 7th grade football and Doty and Stauffer were co-champs for 6th grade football. Griffiths won 8th grade girls' volleyball, Doty won 7th grade girls' volleyball and Griffiths won 6th grade girls' volleyball.

The second rotation consisted of boys' volleyball and girls' soccer and there were five championships being competed for. Griffiths won 8th and 7th grade boys' volleyball and Doty won 6th grade boys' volleyball. Doty and Griffiths were co-champs for girls' varsity soccer and Doty won girls' junior varsity soccer.

The third rotation consisted of boys' and girls' basketball and boys' soccer. There were eight championships being competed for. Sussman won 8th grade boys' basketball, Doty and Stauffer were co-champs for 7th grade boys' basketball and Doty won 6th grade boys' basketball. Doty and Sussman were cochamps for 8th grade girls' basketball, Doty won 7th grade girls' basketball and Stauffer won 6th grade girls' basketball. Stauffer won varsity boys' soccer and Sussman won junior varsity boys' soccer.

The fourth rotation consisted of boys' baseball and girls' softball and there were four championships being competed for. Griffiths won varsity and junior varsity boys' baseball and Griffiths won varsity girls' softball and Doty won junior varsity girls' softball.

The fifth and final rotation was boys' and girls' track and field. Doty won 8th, 7th and 6th grade boys' track and field while Sussman won 8th grade girls' track and field and Doty won 7th and 6th grade girls' track and

This year there will only be 27 championships up for grabs in 2019-20. The boys' and girls' junior varsity baseball and softball teams have been cut due to a difficulty for schools to field competitive teams.

Coaches and players are all looking forward to the start of the new sports seasons and winning championships for their respective schools. Tryouts will begin in August and games will follow shortly thereafter.

In the 90's, racial divides plagued Los Angeles and Downey

Tension especially thrived in the high schools, where students self-segregated their social circles by ethnicity. Agitated students ignited a race riot at Downey High School in June 1993 when an unidentified student threw a banana peel at a group of Black students and yelled a racial epithet. Black and white students hurled food at each other before the melee turned violent. Downey High administrators called in the Downey Police, who dispatched officers to quell the fracas. Upon seeing the first Downey Police officers, some students began to throw food and soda cans at the officers and their patrol cars. By the end of the day, one student was arrested and eight others were suspended.

In the classroom, one teacher, Dolores Neria, witnessed several instances of offhand racist remarks by white students. Once, while supervising the in-class suspension students, Neria noticed a white student reading Adolf Hitler's Mein Kampf. She asked if he was reading the book for a European history class, to which the student responded that the book was his "Bible." She asked him to explain what he meant, but he became irritated and responded, "you know, you're trying to talk to me here, and all I think you're good for is picking strawberries," despite her being of Spanish, not Mexican, ancestry (as the stereotype goes).

Another teacher, Bernie Glasser, recalled multiple students who ascribed to white supremacy. Glasser, who coached the junior varsity baseball team, noticed that the white students in a 1990s team picture aligned their bats to resemble a "W," one symbol of the White Power movement. Another student showed Glasser, who is Jewish, a picture of himself as a young child dressed in the robe and hood of the Ku Klux Klan, which his parents were members

In 1994, two white males at Downey High claimed to belong to the Klan and planned to bring guns to campus and kill the Mexican American and Black students. Investigators found "White Power" slogans written throughout their textbooks. These and other racial divisions rocked the city in the early 1990s. Whereas previous residents emphasized class interests and similarities, contemporary conditions in metropolitan Los Angeles pushed questions of race to the forefront of public consciousness.

Community groups realized that peace lay in commonalities, not differences. A group of residents formed the Advocated for Multicultural Harmony (AMCH in 1993 to promote pan-ethnic solidarity through civic interests. Most similarities emphasized home-owning practices and membership in the American home-owning middle class.

AMCH began with an open meeting in August 1994 and invited residents to write down their concerns about the community and offer solutions. The two most common obstacles that residents identified were prejudice and stereotypes. But the experiment also revealed overwhelming commonalities: both whites and Mexican Americans prioritized issues like cleanliness, property values, discipline, respect for the elders, education, and neighborliness, to name a few. Essentially, AMCH invited all groups to articulate their class interests, prioritized in the name of civic community-building. AMCH sponsored programming to unite residents of different ethnic backgrounds and promote these shared values. Cleanups, house paintings, and other activities hosted by AMCH began to re-emphasize collective civic interests.

While Kay Williams called for whites to leave (and others countered with "go back to Iowa"), AMCH advocated for class-based multiculturalism in Downey. To that end, AMCH also promoted the stories of Mexican Americans who shared the same civic identity as white residents. AMCH profiled Connie Sziebl, a local politician who was born in Mexico, grew up in Downey, and worked for Republican Congressman Steve Horn. Sziebl spoke English, promoted assimilation, and spoke of civic interests. Her work for Horn, beloved by the white and Latino/a/x communities alike, also endeared her to Downey residents.

The central message of AMCH was that homeownership bridged ethnic differences between middle-class whites and Mexican Americans in Downey, and worked to bridge the perceived cultural gap between the two groups during the early years of the 1990s. AMCH sought to unite the community by promoting a civic identity based on safe streets, strong public schools, and high property values.

These became the pillars of the civic identity espoused by incoming middle-class Mexican Americans to protect their quality of life. Demographic change coincided with novel challenges throughout the 1990s, and the civic identity offered solutions. Race-based tension was one problem; fluctuating property values were another. How Mexican Americans responded to that will be the subject of my next installment.

CITY OF DOWNEY NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON A PROPOSED ZONE TEXT AMENDMENT PLN-19-00118

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held before the DOWNEY CITY PLANNING COMMISSION on the 21st day of August, 2019, at 6:30 p.m., in the Council Chambers of the Downey City Hall, 11111 Brookshire Avenue, Downey, California. At that time and place, consideration will be given to the following:

Zoning Code Amendment - An Amendment to the Downey Municipal Code as it relates to Massage Uses and Operational Standards.

All interested parties are invited to submit written comments and/or to attend and give testimony. The staff report, which provides a detailed description and analysis of this project, will be posted to the City's website (http://www.downeyca.org) on the Friday prior to the public hearing.

This ordinance is exempt from review under the California Environmental Quality Act (California Public Resources Code §§ 21000, et seq., "CEQA") and CEQA regulations (14 California Code of Regulations §§ 15000, et seq.) because it establishes rules and procedures to permit operation of existing facilities; consists only of minor revisions and clarifications to existing regulations and specification of procedures related thereto; and consists of actions taken to assure the maintenance, protection and enhancement of the environment. This ordinance, therefore, does not have the potential to cause significant effects on the environment. Consequently, it is categorically exempt from further CEQA review under 14 Cal. Code Regs. §§ 15301, 15305, and 15308, actions in compliance with the requirements of CEQA.

If you challenge the proposed actions in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the Planning Commission at, or prior to, the public hearing.

For more information contact City Planner Crystal Landavazo at 562-904-7154, or at clandavazo@ downeyca.org.

The Woman Who Turned Down a Date with a Cherry Farmer

Of course I regret it. I mean there I was under umbrellas of fruit so red they had to be borne of Summer, and no other season. Flip-flops and fishhooks. Ice cubes made of lemonade and sprigs of mint to slip in blue glasses of tea. I was dusty, my ponytail all askew and the tips of my fingers ran, of course, red from the fruitwounds of cherries I plunked into my bucket and still—he must have seen some small bit of loveliness in walking his orchard with me. He pointed out which trees were sweetest, which ones bore double seeds—puffing out the flesh and oh the surprise on your tongue with two tiny

(a twin spit), making a small gun of your mouth. Did I mention my favorite color is red? His jeans were worn and twisty around the tops of his boot; his hands thick but careful, nimble enough to pull fruit from his trees without tearing the thin skin; the cherry dust and fingerprints on his eyeglasses.

I just know when he stuffed his hands in his pockets, said Okay. Couldn't hurt to try? and shuffled back to his roadside stand to arrange his jelly jars and stacks of buckets, I had made a terrible mistake. I just know my summer would've been full of pies, tartlets, turnovers—so much jubilee.

Downey Unified announces new principals, admins for 2019-20

Changes include new principals at Griffiths and Sussman middle schools, Columbus High School, Gauldin Elementary, and Global Language Academies of Downey.

DOWNEY — The Downey Unified Board of Education would like to announce the appointment of five new principals as well as two new directors at the district office.

Over the summer, Downey Unified appointed two members of the Downey Unified family who are transitioning from school sites to the district office.

Dr. Rani Bertsch, former principal of Griffiths Middle School, has taken the role as Director of Secondary Education and Dr. Robert Jagielski, former principal of Sussman Middle School, has taken the role of Senior Director of Student Safety, Wellness and Engagement (previously Student Services).

Also approved over the summer, promotions and transitions have been made at various campuses across the district that have led to naming new principals at two elementary schools, two middle schools and the continuation high school.

After the retirement of Gauldin Elementary School's principal Dolores Goble last school year, Sylvia Ramirez has been named the new principal of Gauldin. She will be leaving Rio San Gabriel Elementary where she served as vice principal for two years.

Appointed to this principalship late last year, Mrs. Diana Verduzco continues to lead the Carpenter Elementary School campus into a successful new year as she advances the fifth grade and Dual Language Immersion programs forward.

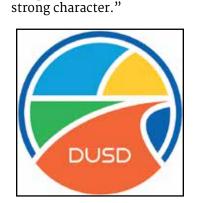

With the transition of Dr. Bertsch and Dr. Jagielski to the district office, Dr. Connie Quintero has been selected as the new principal of Sussman's Middle School and Dr. Anthony Zegarra as the new principal of Griffiths Middle School.

Dr. Quintero will be bidding Downey High School farewell where she served as assistant principal for the last four years. Dr. Zegarra will transition levels as he steps away as principal of Columbus High School to take on the new venture of becoming a middle school principal.

With Dr. Zegarra's transition, an opening at Columbus High School became available and it was unanimously decided to appoint assistant principal Dr. Xochitl Ortiz as the new principal to lead the campus forward.

"The first day of school for all students is Wednesday, August

Getting your offer accepted by a home seller isn't always easy

Making an offer on a house isn't just about telling the seller how much you're willing to pay. It's also important to provide proof that you're able to pay the amount, establish the expected closing date and state how additional costs will be covered and what you expect of the seller leading up to closing.

By submitting an offer, you also need to be prepared to provide earnest money, which shows the seller you're serious about buying the house and can range from $500 to 10 percent of the agreed-upon price.

But don't get ahead of yourself. The first step to making an offer on a house is finding the house you want to purchase within your budget. The next steps are fairly easy, especially when you have your real estate agent walking you through the process. Here's what you need to

When to submit an offer.

Especially if you're house hunting in a market where there are few available properties compared to the number of active buyers, submitting an offer as soon as you're sure you want to buy it is a must. Even if you move quickly, there's a chance you'll find yourself competing with other

How much to offer. While the listing price does provide some insight into the seller's expectations, the value of the property and the work that needs to be done play a larger role.

When you're ready to make an offer, your real estate agent will likely sit you down and show you the sale history of properties nearby to help determine the home's approximate value as it compares to the rest of the need to factor in your personal needs. While your agent will help you consider all the factors that lead to the offer price, the price itself is something you have to determine on your own.

Making a contingent offer. Once you've moved past the price portion of the offer, consider if other needs and conditions will be included. If you already own a home and need to sell it in order to have the money to pay for this new one, an offer contingent on the sale of your house is

This offer contingency can be a sore point for many sellers, especially in a seller's market where other buyers may not have the same constraints.

Barbara Pepoon, a broker with Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in Northbrook, Illinois, recommends putting your home on the market before you start the search for your next house. "Once you have the house under contract, you can make offers with home-close contingency," she says. The contingency will show you've already found a buyer and simply need to have the closing on your purchase take place after the sale is completed, which can even take place on the same day.

Competing against other buyers. Low inventory in many housing markets in the U.S. makes the competition among buyers a constant part of the conversation for many homebuyers, particularly for those who are house hunting for the first time. Many buyers are afraid of getting caught up in a bidding war and paying more than they can afford or losing out on the house of their dreams.

Standing out against competing bids may take a bit more work, but a personal touch and some strategic moves can give you an edge:

Write a personal letter.

It's not recommended for every situation, but a personal letter to the seller can make an offer stand out, especially when the seller appears to have some sentimental attachment to the property. Even if your offer price isn't the strongest, tugging on the seller's heartstrings can win you the deal.

Include quirky numbers. Rather than rounding to the nearest hundred or thousand, let some of the numbers stay specific in your offer. Offering $345,255 instead of $345,000 registers as a higher number when it's just a difference of a couple hundred dollars. If you note you'll cover $1,905 of the seller's legal fees instead of $1,850, the slight difference in dollar amounts can stick in the seller's memory.

Keep in mind that even if you lose out to competing buyers once or even a few times, eventually your bid will be the right one.
