Cases climb every day

Downey had more than three dozen coronavirus cases as of Thursday.

By Eric Pierce Editor

 ${f DOWNEY}$ — The number of confirmed coronavirus cases in Downey continues to swell daily, with the city hosting more than three dozen patients as of Thursday.

Officials with the L.A. County Department of Health said Wednesday that Downey has 37 confirmed COVID-19 cases. The number is expected to rise as testing becomes more prevalent.

Health officials did not say if the 37 cases were Downey residents, hospital patients, or

To date, authorities have identified 3,518 coronavirus cases across all areas of LA County, including 65 deaths.

Of those who were sick, 733 have been hospitalized at some point during their illness.

Emerging evidence suggests that there may be a significant number of people infected with COVID-19 who are asymptomatic and capable of spreading the

New guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) suggests that people should consider using universal precautions all the time - assuming that each of us can infect others even when we aren't sick.

Though the end may not be as close as we'd like, if we all continue to do our part to slow the spread by staying home, social distancing, self-isolating when we are positive or presumed positive, and self-quarantining if we are close contacts of a positive case, we will get to the end of the COVID-19 crisis more quickly, together.'

Public Health has issued the following guidance for people with mild illness during this time of increased spread:

If you are mildly sick, stay home for at least seven days and until 72 hours after being fever and symptom free. Call your doctor if you are concerned and/or your symptoms worsen. Individuals who are elderly, have underlying health conditions or pregnant should consider contacting their providers earlier when they are sick.

Surrounding cities have also received confirmed coronavirus cases, including Norwalk (21), Whittier (15), Pico Rivera (14), South Gate (25) and Paramount

Downey pastor dies one week after COVID-19 diagnosis

Alex Bernard was a community leader and pastor at Desert Reign Church.

DOWNEY — Alex Bernard, an outreach pastor at Desert Reign Church in Downey, died Saturday, one week after he was diagnosed with COVID-19.

"Our hearts are heavy. Our dear Pastor Alex has gone on to be with the Lord," the church wrote on Facebook. "He loved the Lord, his family and had a huge heart to help people. He will be missed beyond words."

Bernard posted a selfie on March 20 from Kaiser experiencing a dry cough. His condition quickly deteriorated.

Downey fashion designer pivots to masks

DOWNEY — To help combat the COVID-19 health crisis, Downey's Johana Hernández, fashion designer of choice amongst new Latinx Hollywood celebrities, is making safety masks for hospital workers at PIH Health Hospital in Downey.

Hernández's connection to the hospital is personal - her father's life was saved from a heart attack by the hospital's expert staff.

Hernández is also teaching people how to make safety masks from home through online videos on the Glaudi YouTube channel.

Hernández recently launched Glaudi Beverly Hills and was inducted into the Hall of Fame at her alma mater Downey High School, where she was enshrined along the likes of The Carpenters and Metallica's James Hetfield.

Born in Compton of Salvadorian parents, Hernández is the first designer of Salvadoran descent to go to Paris Fashion Week and has designed many dresses for young Latinx celebrities. Like many Latin American immigrants, her parents worked long hours in the Los Angeles garment industry sewing for brands such as Calvin Klein, Guess and Gap.

This is where Hernández got her inspiration to make her own name in fashion. At age 19, she got her first job as a head designer. Her first collection was presented in the Wall Street Journal.

At age 22, she was the head designer for Seven7 Jeans, in where she designed for all sizes including plus sizes. She also designed for Isaac Mizrahi Jeans, Eli Tahari, Disney personality Hannah Montana, and more.

Hernández' collections are available exclusively at GLAUDI stores locations. At age 24, she showcased her own collection, GLAUDI by Johana Hernández for a cause; through her fashion events and sales, she would donate for low income children in Latin America.

Hernández also made her triumphant return from Paris Fashion Week where she showed for the third time, a first for a designer of Salvadoran descent. Students unlikely to return this school year

DOWNEY — California public schools are expected to remain physically closed for the rest of the school year as the state works to slow the spread of the coronavirus outbreak, Gov. Gavin Newsom said Wednesday.

Downey public schools are currently scheduled to reopen May 5 but the Downey board of education will meet Tuesday where they will consider the school district's options moving forward.

At a news conference Wednesday, California Superintendent Tony Thurmond acknowledged that the pivot to online learning will be difficult but "we have to rise to that challenge."

In a letter to the state's superintendents Tuesday, Thurmond said these are "unprecedented times."

"Due to the current safety concerns and needs for ongoing social distancing it currently appears that our students will not be able to return to school campuses before the end of the school year," Thurmond wrote.

It's not a mandate, but it will give school districts the cover to do what many already felt was necessary, said Troy Flint, spokesperson for the California School Boards Association.

Flint said Thurmond's letter gives districts the "security they feel they need to make a decision and explain that to their communities."

It's not clear how the campus closures will affect graduation ceremonies.

"This is something that we are taking extremely seriously and we are considering all options as, again, we know how important these ceremonies are for our students and families," DUSD said on Instagram. "As this situatoin continues to change quickly, we never want to rule out the option of still holding these events just at a later

Andrew Cuomo reminds us how it's done

By Jeff Robbins

In "The Splendid and the Vile," his new book about former Prime Minister Winston Churchill's stewardship of Britain through the desperate early months of World War II, Erik Larson details the seemingly hopeless circumstances confronting the country. Germany had overrun Europe and was poised to begin a bombing campaign aimed at obliterating British cities and, if that didn't force England's surrender, to invade England. By late 1941, 45,000 Britons had been killed and 52,000 injured. Three hundred thousand British soldiers were trapped at Dunkirk, certain to be captured or annihilated. German submarines were preventing supplies from reaching Britain, which was effectively on its own.

Churchill was defiant. "We shall not fail or falter," he proclaimed. "We shall not weaken or tire. Neither the sudden shock of battle nor the long-drawn trails of vigilance and exertion will wear us down." His people knew that he was as tireless as he was asking them to be. "Papa has served them with his heart (and) his mind," Churchill's daughter wrote in her diary, "and they have given him in his finest and darkest hour their love and confidence.'

It is fair to say that Americans have not been similarly blessed during the current crisis. The Daily Dissemble, the White House "briefings" on the novel coronavirus, are substantially mixtures of misrepresentation and nonsense. The president has two signature specialties. One is making claims demonstrated within 24 hours to be misleading or simply false. The other is settling upon a truly meaningless banality ("It's very important that our economy be strong. A strong economy is very, very important. Really important.") and just repeating it endlessly, as though doing so makes it less meaningless. Both have been on full display during these briefings.

One bright spot has been New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, who, like Churchill, has had to deliver continuously dreadful news while inspiring confidence. Americans confined to their homes have taken to tuning in to the governor's daily press conferences not only to hear about the state of things in New York but also to get reminded of what leadership looks like.

It has been 90 years since Americans made it a regular point to listen to what a leader had to say. Our grandparents and greatgrandparents gathered to listen to then-President Franklin Roosevelt's fireside chats during the Great Depression because they felt they could trust him: to tell the truth, to know what he was doing, to have a plan of action, to empathize with them. Cuomo brings these qualities to his briefings, and Americans living nowhere near New York tune in because of it.

In truth, even a leader merely playing with the proverbial full deck of cards would be a sight for sore eyes for Americans, who have been deprived of this for three years. But Cuomo has been just what the doctor ordered. In contrast to the president's profound unreliability, Cuomo exudes command: Here is Plan A. Here is why it is urgent that Plan A work. Here are the problems that we face making Plan A work. Here is what we are doing to solve those problems. Here is Plan B.

Cuomo, a tough political gut fighter, has provided both humanity and inspiration while showcasing hands-on management.

"This is going to be a long day, and it's going to be a hard day, and it's going to be an ugly day, and it's going to be a sad day," Cuomo told the National Guard before deploying it to assist reeling New Yorkers.

He reaffirmed the words of his late father and predecessor, Gov. Mario Cuomo, on what a democratic government is supposed to mean. It is, he reiterated, "family, mutuality, the sharing of benefits and burdens for the good of all, feeling one another's pain, sharing one another's blessings - reasonably, honestly, fairly, without respect to race or sex or geography or political affiliation.

Cuomo's management and words have reassured a deeply anxious nation, one that is grateful to him for his finest hour.

Why did the U.S. put China first?

By Michelle Malkin

A little less than two months ago, the U.S. State Department made a curious announcement that suggests President Trump's "America First" administration put "China First" at a critical moment during the burgeoning Wuhan pandemic.

I asked the State Department about the controversy this week and the vague and nonresponsive responses I received on background from a Foggy Bottom spokesperson raise more questions than they

The Feb. 7, 2020 press statement attributed to Secretary of State Mike Pompeo is headlined: "The United States Announces Assistance to Combat the Novel Coronavirus." That week, we are told, the State Department "facilitated the transportation of nearly 17.8 tons of donated medical supplies to the Chinese people, including masks, gowns, gauze, respirators, and other vital materials. These donations are a testament to the generosity of the American people.'

Whoa, whoa, whoa. Nearly 18 tons of critical medical supplies went to the Communist government whose country unleashed COVID-19 on the world, downplayed it, punished whistleblowers who warned about it and attacked critics worldwide as racist? Whose idea was this "generosity?" Which "American people" approved this plan? Was the aid solicited or unsolicited? I asked our government.

The answer: "We have no additional details at this time."

The press statement elaborated further that "the United States government is announcing it is prepared to spend up to $100 million in existing funds to assist China and other impacted countries... to contain and combat the novel coronavirus. This commitment — along with the hundreds of millions generously donated by the help the Chinese people contain the impact and stem the spread of American private sector — demonstrates strong U.S. leadership in response to the outbreak.

How much of the "up to $100 million" has been spent to assist China instead of the American people since Feb. 7, I asked our government.

The answer: No reply.

By what means were the 18 tons of medical goods transported: Air or sea? If by sea, on what ships were the goods transported to China and when and where did they arrive? If by air, which carriers transported the goods and when and where did they arrive?

(I asked about shipping because U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Elaine Chao's family owns the New York-based multinational shipping behemoth, Foremost Group. The mega-fleet was built in China, subsidized with loans from the ChiComs' Export-Import bank and conducts nearly three-quarters of its freight business in China. Secretary Chao was designated an "international consultant" of the Wuhan government in 2009. Her sister, Angela Chao, is CEO of Foremost and organized a humanitarian shipment of masks, gloves and gowns from New York to Wuhan in partnership with the "Hubei Charity Foundation" a week after the State Department's press statement.)

I also asked whether any of the precious medical supply items shipped to China in February were sent back to the U.S. as part of White House adviser Jared Kushner's "Project Airbridge" transfer of personal protective equipment last weekend from China to New York including 130,000 No5 masks, 1.8 million face masks and gowns, more than 10.3 million gloves and more than 70,000 thermometers?

Here's the full answer I received from the State Department

"In early February the American people demonstrated their characteristic generosity by donating 17.8 tons of medical supplies to COVID-19 from Wuhan to other parts of China and the world. These donations were provided by Samaritan's Purse, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Intermountain Healthcare, and Boeing. The State Department facilitated the delivery of these medical supplies to Project HOPE in China on flights that ultimately brought home over 800 American citizens back from Wuhan at the outbreak of the pandemic."

Odd. Very odd. Boeing's huge shipment of 250,000 medical masks was reported on Jan. 29, more than a week before the State Department's announcement. Side note: Was it "characteristic generosity" or self-serving corporate relations? The troubled aircraft company has been desperately seeking business after China's de facto boycott the past couple of years and stands to benefit most from the China trade deal signed in January. Also: Did the multinational company's purported goodwill gesture deprive the American people of scarce PPE resources? Sure seems so.

LDS's own press statement about its donations to China was also released Jan. 29 and made no mention of the State Department's role in facilitating delivery of "220,000 respirator masks, 870 protective goggles and more than 6,500 protective coveralls." It appears LDS has its very own special relationship with "Project Hope," a nongovernmental organization that works closely with the Chinese Ministry of Health. The church chartered flights from Salt Lake City and Atlanta to Shanghai at the behest of its president, Dr. Russell Nelson, who had performed heart surgeries in China. Photos of the LDS church's PPE drop show LDS volunteers in Shanghai smiling in front of a massive wall of 3M boxes full of medical equipment on Feb.

Finally, the State Department's red-flag mention that some of the planes used to deliver these resources to China brought back 800 Americans from Wuhan deserves more probing. Was this entire "charitable" exercise — which sent abroad 18 tons of the very items Americans are now desperately scraping to manufacture out of paper towels, pillow fabric and bandanas — cover for some sort of COVID-

Keep the government out of private labor

By John Stossel

Congress passed and the president signed a $2 trillion "stimulus"

"Not enough!" shrieked politicians. They said the government Now it's one of the poorest. must do more.

They demanded President Donald Trump reactivate the Defense Production Act, a 1950 law that lets government force companies to make things.

Trump hesitated.

That upset lovers of big dictatorial government. They demanded the president order companies to make respirators, masks and other desperately needed medical equipment.

CNN's Alisyn Camerota joined the media mob asking "What's the holdup!?" Then a White House press reporter confronted Trump at the White House, asking, "Why not use it now?"

The president surprised me by responding: "We're a country not based on nationalizing our business. Call a person over in Venezuela, ask them, 'how did nationalization of their businesses work out?'

Not too well."

No, it didn't.

Venezuela was once one of the richest countries in Latin America

That's because government dictating production leads to less production.

Although Venezuela has more oil in the ground than any other country, once the socialists nationalized the oil industry, production declined. Today, Venezuelans struggle to buy gasoline.

When government orders companies to do things, companies don't innovate. They're less able to adjust quickly to market demand. That's the topic of my new video. Today, hospitals need more ventilators. But the government doesn't need to order companies to make more. The private sector is already on it. Automakers slowed car production and are gearing up their factories to produce ventilators. Other businesses are, too. That's what businesses do when conditions change; they pivot. Distillers that once made gin and vodka now make hand sanitizer. The federal government had to waive regulations to allow them to

Some give it away. It's not just charity; it's "goodwill." They hope customers will remember the good deed, and that'll lead to profit in

The best catalyst to spur production is simple pursuit of profit. It's what gets companies to produce new things instantly. Unlike governments, businesses have no guaranteed income. To survive, let alone grow, they must constantly innovate to make sure more money comes in than goes out.

The socialists call that "greed."

Without question, some tycoons are greedy. They pursue profit to the point that they have more money than they will ever need.

That's fine. That greed for success drives them to get me what I

The profit motive delivers the goods. Higher prices tell companies what products are most urgently needed.

When our government failed to produce enough coronavirus test kits, private companies filled the gap. Some offered convenient tests you could use at home.

But the government didn't like it, saying the test hadn't been approved. The tests were withdrawn.

Government's rules often make it harder for private actors to help people. In a crisis, America's unsung heroes are people who law said they must not work more than 11 hours a day. Finally, the government suspended the regulation. We ought to suspend a lot of these rules permanently. Allow

In this crisis, businesses are trying all sorts of new things. Supermarkets started offering special "senior hours" so older people can safely get supplies we need.

Musicians are livestreaming concerts.

Restaurants are switching to takeout and delivery.

People have lost jobs, but if businesses are free to adapt, they'll create many new jobs.

Because demand for deliveries has increased. Amazon is hiring 100,000 new workers. Walmart is hiring 150,000. The free market adjusts. We don't need "production acts" to tell us what to do.

Rent relief

Dear Editor:

There is a movement to allow renters not to pay rent while the coronavirus crisis is with us. This movement ignores the situation of small landlords like myself.

I am retired and depend on rental income for my survival. If we are going to help renters, it is only fair that we also help small landlords whose income depends on rental income and who will be in a precarious situation without it.

My quarantine diary

By Eric Pierce

Day 1 of quarantine

This isn't so bad. I'm able to work remotely thanks to my laptop and iPhone. I've set up my workstation on the dining room table, located dangerously close to the refrigerator.

My heart aches for the small business owners who were either forced to shut down or saw their customer traffic drastically reduced. And what about the workers not lucky enough to work from home? How soon can they begin collecting unemployment? How will they pay their bills?

After Downey had its water scare in 2008, forcing all restaurants to close for several days, the city created Taste of Downey, a community festival to shine a light on our local eateries. I wonder what we can do this time around; sort of like a grand re-opening celebration for all of Downey.

Day 2

Two people have asked if Downey is writing street sweeping tickets. I don't know the answer and my contacts at City Hall are not eager to talk. The general consensus among the public is, "I guess we'll find out."

My work day has been mostly spent tweeting about cancellations and postponements. Lots of dinners, galas, golf tournaments, and charity walks have all either been pushed to the fall or canceled altogether. Downey's nonprofit organizations are taking a real hit financially.

Working so close to the refrigerator may have been a mistake.

Day 3

I drove past Porto's Bakery and the place was packed with no social distancing. People are standing very close together, both inside the dining room where they wait for their food, and in a line that stretches outside. I love Porto's but I'm not willing to sacrifice my health for a cheese roll.

I'm noticing a lot more families outside taking walks and riding their bikes. It's really nice.

Day 4

On the hunt for toilet paper, I acted on a Facebook tip and visited a store called Big Outlet in South Gate. And let me tell you, it was the sketchiest store I've ever been to. But I made it out with two industrial rolls of TP, so it was a success.

Day 5

It's Friday but honestly each day is indistinguishable from the previous.

I called my mom and told her grocery stores are opening early for senior citizens. She warned me never to call her a senior citizen again and hung up on me.

Day 6

My wife and I unearthed a 1,000-piece puzzle somebody had given us for Christmas. Nicole is prepared to start the puzzle but I'm not ready for that kind of commitment. The puzzle, however, is on standby in case our situation does not rapidly improve.

Day 7

I'm torn between strict orders to quarantine and a desire to help our local small businesses. I walked to 3rd Street Coffee and picked up two chai lattes before hurrying back home.

Day 8

Nicole has started working from home also. Her work station is in the living room, directly across from me.

It's nice to have company but she's developed a habit of blowing me kisses, and I'm expected to "catch" them and plant them on my cheek. I don't know how long I can take it.

Day 9

I've relocated to the guest bedroom.

Day 10

Curious to see what all the fuss is about, I started watching "Tiger King" on Netflix. Two episodes in and I don't see how this show can get any stranger. I shall continue my binge tomorrow.

Day 11

Oh my god.

Day 12

I no longer remember what jeans feel like.

Day 13

It is an incredibly sad day as the first coronavirus death hits Downey. Pastor Alex Bernard of Desert Reign Church succumbs to the virus one week after he is diagnosed with COVID-19.

I've noticed some panic from community members, and residents are lashing out at Downey's elected officials.

The pandemic is a global concern and Downey is relying heavily on the L.A. County Public Health Department for guidance. But there are areas in which Downey can improve, especially in regards to communication.

Tell us if parking laws are being enforced. Tell us if Downey police officers are enforcing the governor's "safer at home" orders. Tell us why CalMet is mixing our recyclables with trash.

I wish Downey would take off the kiddie gloves and give it to us straight.

Not every statement has to be a polished video. Talk to us like neighbors. Give us some assurances that the city is doing all it can to keep its citizens safe.

We shouldn't have to rely on Mayor Eric Garcetti of Los Angeles for leadership.

Day 14

Feeling regret that I did not purchase stock in Zoom.

Day 15

It's become apparent that life won't return to normal anytime soon. Depression is sinking in and I wish I could fast-forward life to July or August.

I know these hard times are temporary and it will eventually pass. But at what cost?

In the meantime, I try to be thankful for everything I have.

Day 16

One of my favorite parts of living in Downey is watching the airplanes pass overhead, especially at night. I wonder if they're coming home or visiting from someplace else. I don't see as many planes anymore.

My pants are feeling a little snug; I must have washed them incorrectly.

A coworker posted an Instagram picture of her sixpack. She is now blocked.

Day 17

Even with the state under quarantine, Downey is indeed ticketing vehicles blocking the street sweeper.

This seems insensitive to me with so many people home, either working or laid off.

It's particularly egregious in Downey, a city notorious for building housing with insufficient parking. Not everyone has the luxury of a garage or private driveway.

Other local cities have suspended parking citations with exceptions for vehicles that pose a danger. I wish Downey would do the same.

I just looked at the calendar and realized it's April 1.

Somehow, some way, we made it through March.

First responders and unexpected heroes

By Carol Kearns Contributor

This article first appeared on carolsmorningecho.wordpress.com on March 23. It is reprinted here with permission.

DOWNEY — My older daughter is a checker for a large supermarket chain. Just a few weeks ago, in early March, she called to vent a little about how stressful and exhausting work had become. Even though this wasn't a holiday season, she and others had started working ten-hour shifts with only 30-minute lunch breaks. Shoppers seemed tense and weren't exchanging pleasantries like they used to. There was a run on bottled water and paper towels as people started stocking up on items useful

Since February the media had been brimming with stories of the extreme measures being used to combat the new, highly contagious virus, COVID-19, that was spreading around the world. Millions of people had been quarantined in Wuhan, China, where the virus first appeared, and over three thousand people on a cruise ship were confined for weeks when an outbreak was discovered. The virus showed up in the state of Washington, carried there by a traveler and resulting in the death of several people.

As I did my best to offer sympathy, it finally hit me—Amy city like Milan left everyone shaken. Americans who had seen the pictures of empty store shelves in Italy were preparing for a possible health crisis here. People felt the danger, I told her, and the normalcy of the grocery market experience, with cashiers and courtesy clerks who remained professional and even cheerful, was reassuring.

My view of Amy and others as heroes only deepened as the week went by. Now there was a serious run on toilet paper and cleaning products. I was thrilled to score two containers of the few remaining anti-bacterial wipes—one for Amy and one for Natalie who has a new baby.

When the National Basketball Association canceled its season on March 11, followed by a postponement of hockey, soccer, and baseball games, panic buying appeared in full force. Shelves were quickly emptied of almost everything—milk, eggs, soup, canned tomatoes, bread, pasta, flour. The Los Angeles Unified School District didn't hesitate long before closing all campuses, with no plan for alternative education. Flights from Europe to the US were abruptly restricted, causing considerable fear and difficulty for Americans trying to get home. The complete closure of Disneyland removed all doubt about the global threat from Amy came for dinner one night after a long shift—too tired to shop for food that she needed. The anxiety of the customers was "heightened" she said, their behavior like a "megaphone" for their feelings.

When I repeated my assessment that she and her coworkers, more than ever, were serving as first responders in a crisis, she replied that one person actually said, "Thank you for your service," and she had to fight back tears. Another checker told me that she received similar expressions of gratitude.

In Memory of

Suonghong Phan Lobato February 10, 1954 - March 10, 2020

Suonghong Phan Lobato was born on February 10, 1954 in Vietnam to Quynh Phan. She entered into eternal rest on March 10, 2020 in Downey, California at the age of 66.

Suong was intelligent and a determined individual that loved her family dearly, and was committed to her work as a USDA Investigator in Food Inspections for 31 years. She was a devout Catholic, with a strong faith, which gave her great comfort throughout her illness.

Suong loved spending time with her family, especially with her grandchildren. Her hobbies included traveling, volunteering, and raising orchids. She enjoyed going to Las Vegas and Pala Casino to play the slots, and vacationing in Hawaii, since it made her feel like being home in Vietnam. She was an active member of the Women's Guild of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church and the Secretary of The Society of Saint Vincent de Paul.

Suong leaves behind her loving husband, David W. Lobato of Downey, CA, her daughter, Hong Loan Hull (and her husband, Tim) of Downey, CA, her son, Quan Nguyen (and his wife, Debbie) of Covina, CA, her son, Phan David Nguyen of San Diego, CA, her daughter, KieuMy Nguyen of Long Beach, CA, and her son, Duybao Nguyen of Fountain Valley, CA. She also leaves behind 7 grandchildren, and her mother, Quynh Phan of Norwalk, CA, as well as many other family and friends who will greatly miss her.

Milk has been a precious commodity at grocery stores recently. Photo by Carol Kearns

There were lighter moments, of course. When one of the new courtesy clerks, following his training, asked a customer, "So, did you find everything you were looking for?" she burst out laughing, "Nooooo!"

The next day Frank went to the store at 6:00 AM, and came home with two large packages of toilet paper—one for Amy and one for Natalie. Later I went shopping for both of them, looking for available items I thought each could use—milk, bread, pasta, frozen dinners, diapers.

The factual news conferences of Mayor Eric Garcetti and Governor Gavin Newsom were particularly helpful. Conflicting information was still coming from the federal level—Yes, everyone who wanted to be tested could be tested; No, our country did not have enough tests for everyone. The straight-forward answers of city and state leaders contributed significantly to maintaining a degree of normalcy.

Amy's store and others shortened their hours. They also started imposing limits on the number of particular items each customers could purchase. Bottled water was limited to two flats per customer, and checkers were required to remove any items above the limit and put them off to the side. Then signs went up stating only one container of milk per household, one loaf of bread, etc. Most customers understood the need for rules; a few swore at the checkers who were following the guidelines.

I applaud the grocery stores for imposing these regulations. It reassures the public to know that when food arrives, it will be distributed fairly. The last thing we need to see during this pandemic are fights over food. Limiting the entry of customers to only a certain number at a time also promotes safe social distancing.

This past Wednesday, I heard Mayor Garcetti refer to the heroic grocery workers—twice—in a news conference. I was so glad to hear that I wasn't the only one who was thinking this. But grocery workers need, and deserve, more than just our thanks. They need concrete help in the form of time to shop for themselves (without having to go store to store like the rest of us) and protective clothing while at work.

It's no exaggeration to include grocery workers in the team of first responders. Not only are they putting in long hours to serve the community, they are facing danger every minute on the job. Even as the rest of us are ordered to stay home and practice social distancing, grocery workers are within a few feet of the several hundred customers who comes through each line daily.

The grocery workers didn't volunteer for the job of herobut there they are. Their extra-long hours of service to the community, at personal risk themselves, go a long way in helping us remember that we are a civilized society and our best chance of eliminating the threat of COVID-19 is through cooperative behavior.

Hats off to the grocery workers who stock the shelves, set out the produce, package the meat, ring up our items, and bag our purchases. You are a critical part of the team of first responders in the face of this pandemic.

POETRY MATTERS Often I Am Permitted to Return to a Meadow as if it were a scene made-up by the mind, that is not mine, but is a made place, that is mine, it is so near to the heart, an eternal pasture folded in all thought so that there is a hall therein that is a made place, created by light wherefrom the shadows that are forms fall.

Wherefrom fall all architectures I am I say are likenesses of the First Beloved whose flowers are flames lit to the Lady.

She it is Queen Under The Hill whose hosts are a disturbance of words within words that is a field folded.

It is only a dream of the grass blowing east against the source of the sun in an hour before the sun's going down whose secret we see in a children's game of ring a round of roses told.

Often I am permitted to return to a meadow as if it were a given property of the mind that certain bounds hold against chaos, that is a place of first permission, everlasting omen of what is.

Robert Duncan, The Opening of the Field, New Directions 1960

In difficult times, we are encouraged to find our "happy place," and return to it in imagination. Duncan shares his with us. Poetry Matters is curated by Lorine Parks.

Villanueva pushed back aggressively. During a Monday Kuehl said who takes the afternoon briefing from the That report highlighted a lead in any given emergency county's Emergency Operations lack of coordination between all depends on the type of Center, he said he had a message disease.

"This will impact public safety and public health," Villanueva warned. "They're going to reassign the job to a financial analyst, and not a first responder with experience managing natural disasters and man-made. We're in the middle of a global public health crisis.

toward the traditional fixedrate mortgage — often with 15or 30-year terms — but home loans aren't one-size-fits-all. You may be able to get an even lower initial interest rate, and a term that's more suitable to your needs, with an adjustable-rate mortgage, or ARM.

Comparing ARM and fixedrate mortgages will help you choose the best home loan for your current needs and future goals.

biggest difference between ARM and fixed-rate mortgages is how interest works. Fixed-rate loans have interest rates that never change. ARM rates reset at specific intervals over the full loan term. Adjustable-rate mortgages can be a powerful tool for home buyers with shorter-term goals in mind, but they do have their ARMs begin with a set interest rate for a specified period of time, then the rate is adjusted periodically after that. The key to knowing how an ARM will adjust is hidden in its name: A 5/1 ARM means your rate will be fixed for five years, then adjusted common ARM terms have initial fixed-rate periods of three, five, seven or 10 years.

Although ARM interest rates start lower than fixedrate loan rates, there's always a chance they will reset higher several times over the life of the loan, increasing your mortgage payment.

If you're settled into your career, have a growing family or are ready to set down some roots in a community you love, a 15- or 30-year fixed-rate mortgage may

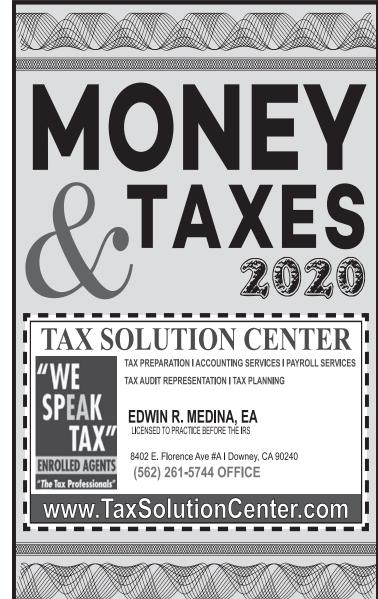

Many home buyers gravitate annually, for example. The most be right for you. With a lockedin rate, you'll always know what your payment will be. And if rates drop or your home appreciates significantly a few years into your mortgage, you can always take advantage by refinancing into another fixed-rate mortgage at the lower rate.

> Adjustable-rate mortgages, on the other hand, most often appeal to first-time homebuyers because lower rates boost buying power. If you're advancing in a career that could require you to move within a few years, are thinking about starting a family, or just want to keep your longterm options open, an ARM could be a good choice. You'll get the benefit of a lower introductory rate and the flexibility to move away or trade up to a bigger home before the fixed-rate period

You'll want to do the math to make sure that if rates rise after the introductory period, your income can handle the higher monthly payments.
