Kaiser mandates vaccine for its workers

■ Kaiser Permanente joins a growing list of private sector companies requiring that its employees be vaccinated.

Kaiser Permanente has announced that the COVID-19 vaccine will be required for all employees and Kaiser joins the list of major companies that have mandated the vaccine for its employees.

The organization has set a target of September 30 to have all employees fully vaccinated.

Officials say all unvaccinated employees and physicians will be required to be fully vaccinated or apply for medical or religious

As of July 31, officials say that 77.8% of Kaiser Permanente employees and more than 95% of its physicians have been fully Kaiser will also begin testing unvaccinated employees twice a week starting Aug. 23.

"As the country's largest integrated care delivery system, we feel it is our responsibility to do everything we can to help bring an end to the pandemic, especially in light of the dramatic increase in COVID-19 cases from the highly infectious Delta variant" said Greg A. Adams, Chair and Chief Executive Officer, Kaiser Foundation Hospitals and Kaiser is the largest nongovernment employer in L.A. County, according to the Los Angeles Almanac.

L.A. County

The county has been experiencing sharp increases daily case numbers. hospitalizations and testpositivity rates over the past several weeks, with the increases attributed to the highly infectious Delta variant of the coronavirus.

As expected with the surge in COVID cases among the general public, the county's homeless population has also seen a sharp increase in infections in recent weeks. For the week that ended July 25, 111 new cases were confirmed among the homeless, up 21% from the previous week.

Throughout the pandemic, 7,588 COVID cases have been reported among the homeless, and 216 have died.

County figures show that as of July 27, among 4.9 million fully vaccinated residents, 10,656 tested positive for the virus, for a rate of 0.22%. That rate marks a 63% increase from a week prior, but still remains statistically low. Among the vaccinated people, only 410 were hospitalized, for a rate of 0.008%, and only 35 died, a rate of 0.0007%. From Jan. 1 through June 30 of this year, 99.8% of the people who died from COVID-19 were unvaccinated or only partially vaccinated, L.A. County health director Barbara Ferrer said.

While the pace of vaccinations has slowed significantly, Ferrer said the county has now seen two consecutive weeks of small increases in the number of people receiving a first dose. Between July 19 and 25, about 70,000 doses were administered in the county, up about 7,500 from the previous Vaccination rates remain low among younger residents, particularly the Black community. As of July 25, only 30% of Black residents age 16-17 and 18-29 had received at least one shot.

Downey set to make history with LGBTQ picnic

■ Downey's first picnic celebrating the gay and queer community is set for Saturday from 12-4 pm at Furman Park.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY – Downey's first ever LGBTQ Pride Family picnic will take place this Saturday at Furman Park.

The city's recognition of its LGBTQ community has been brought to the forefront of conversations over the past year, leading to the city declaring the month of June as "Pride Month," and raising the rainbow-colored flag over city hall.

The culminating picnic, which is officially being put on by the Los Angeles Centers for Alcohol and Drug Abuse (LA CADA), is expected to draw upwards of 1000 people. Attendees can expect food, music, and informational resources, as well as entertainment, including a Councilman Mario Trujillo who is openly gay - called the picnic "an opportunity for our is providing all the staging, families to have those teaching moments" and "is a step to changing hearts and minds.

"We're giving them a natural setting to be able to talk about sexuality and labels and things like that," said Trujillo. "Most importantly, to let people know that it's okay, that we're part of the community and we're

At wellness centers, Downey students gain access to mental health services

■ All public middle schools and high schools in Downey will be equipped with mental health resources.

Greater accessibility to mental health and wellness services will be a major focus in Downey Unified as students return to classes on Aug. 11. A key part of this initiative is the creation of new Wellness Centers on the district's four middle and three high school

The Wellness Centers will be each school's mental health onestop-shop, centralizing access to vital student services such as counseling, clinical therapy, community resource referrals and more, all under one roof.

"As a district, Downey Unified recognizes the importance of the whole child and wants to support our students' educational abilities as well as their social emotional wellbeing—especially following each school will personalize their Wellness Center décor to reflect their school colors, spirit and

As the Centers grow and are integrated into campus life, the Wellness Centers may be able to accommodate group meetings to encourage student mental health clubs and host parent groups as well as be used for peer support and advocacy groups on campus.

It is important to Downey Unified that each Wellness Center site be in an easily accessible location that encourages students to seek invaluable mental health tools while also maintaining their right to privacy.

"Life happens. During the pandemic our students, families and the entire community have been impacted in some way. Mental health is a critical factor in everyone's life, and this couldn't be more true now more than ever before.

"Even in the Olympics we recently saw how even physically gifted athletes can be impacted by mental health," shared Dr. Robert Jagielski, Senior Director of Student Safety, Wellness and

"The way we face various tragedies, traumas and even celebrations has changed. In our technology-driven, social media centered world, our youth face challenges like never before and our goal is to have a place where students and families can find resources and support. We are proud that we will now have our Wellness Centers as well as our Centers' staff and service providers to centralize our support systems."

Upon the return to school, students will be able to access existing and new services by simply walking in to meet with Wellness Center staff and scheduling an appointment. Trained academic counselors and teachers will also be encouraged to help identify students who

Students who are identified as needing extended support, such as during a particularly difficult time, will be granted access to the Wellness Center during the school day to attend scheduled appointments with an on-campus Licensed Clinical Therapist or guided toward community-based resources that may fit their individual needs.

Among Downey Unified's longstanding partnerships with various area mental health service providers, Pacific Clinics will provide the most robust oncampus program in the district.

The Wellness Centers' will work dedicated staff collaboratively with academic counselors provide personalized pathways students to seamlessly transition between academic and wellness support.

With the addition of three full-time therapists at Downey and Warren high schools and two at Columbus High and each of Downey Unified's four middle schools, each secondary school will be more than doubling the availability of services and staff to students. Beyond the secondary schools, Downey Unified's 13 elementary schools will also have additional therapists assigned and available to elementary students as needed.

"Although we have always had numerous supports in place, with the opening of seven new on-campus Wellness Centers at each of our middle and high schools, we can proudly say Downey Unified is on its way to creating a model districtwide program that will proactively provide students with the muchneeded support this upcoming school year and beyond," further shared Dr. Jagielski.

The victim, an adult male, stated he was leaving a friend's home when he was confronted by a male walking by. The adult male suspect accused the victim of disrespecting him and told the victim he was going to kill him. The suspect then chased the victim with an object in his hand, which the victim believed was a knife. The victim was able to flag down officers. The suspect was located and a box cutter type knife was located on his person. The suspect was

On July 19 at 4:15 pm, officers were called to the 13600 block of Bixler Ave. in regards to a victim who was assaulted with a metal pipe. The adult male victim said he was assaulted by 3-4 males, and struck with a metal pipe during the assault. The detective bureau responded to the scene.

On July 20 at 7:25 am, officers responded to the area of Manzanar Ave. and Telegraph Rd. in regard to a possible vehicle bomb. A Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputy located a reported stolen vehicle parked and unoccupied in the area. The deputy looked inside the van and noticed wires running to underneath the front dashboard and he could hear random electronic tones. Local residents were evacuated and the LASD Bomb Squad responded to assist Downey Police personnel. The vehicle was inspected and deemed safe.

On July 23 at 1 am, officers were dispatched to 7-11 (11853 Downey Ave.) to an armed robbery in progress. The suspects entered the store and pointed a firearm at the clerk and patrons. One suspect removed currency from the register, while the second suspect stole a cell phone from a customer and removed a necklace from another patron. The suspects fled the scene prior to officers arriving. Forensics was called in to process the scene and detectives are actively investigating the Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

A DEXA scan, also known as a bone mineral density scan, is a useful, easy, and inexpensive imaging test that measures bone density. DEXA stands for "dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry," and uses very low levels of x-rays. It provides useful details about bone loss, and the risk for osteoporosis and bone fractures.

Who should get one, and when?

Osteoporosis literally means "porous bone." Brittle bones lead to a higher risk of having a bone fracture. As we age, our bones lose thickness and strength; they get weaker and break more easily. Osteoporosis results when we lose bone faster than our body can create new bone tissue. It is seen most often in postmenopausal women, and some don't realize that they have osteoporosis until after a bone breaks.

How does the DEXA scan work? You will lie on a special x-ray table, and be carefully positioned. As the arm of the DEXA machine passes over the body, it uses two different x-ray beams, which emit very low levels of radiation.

The scanner translates bone density measurement data into pictures and graphs. Bone appears white, and fat and muscle appear as shadows in the background.

The DEXA scan comes up with a bone score. The convention is that normal bone is equal to that of a typical 30-year-old woman, with an assigned score of 0.

The range of normal bone is from 0 to -1.0. A score between -1.0 and -2.5 is labeled as osteopenia, meaning that the bone mass is low.

Many people, including those who are slender and active, fall into this category. Osteopenia will not necessarily progress to osteoporosis. However, if there are other risk factors for fracture, such a person might still be a candidate for an osteoporosis medication.

Finally, a score of -2.5 or more is considered to be osteoporosis.

DEXA scans are also used to track bone health and to monitor responses to treatment. They can be used to evaluate body composition, such as the proportion of fat to muscle mass.

Who should get a DEXA scan? Typically, scanning is performed on women and, depending on risk factors, may begin for some after age 50.

Risk factors include a history of broken bones, long-term steroid use, a family history of osteoporosis, the use of certain cancer drugs, and the use of organ transplant medications.

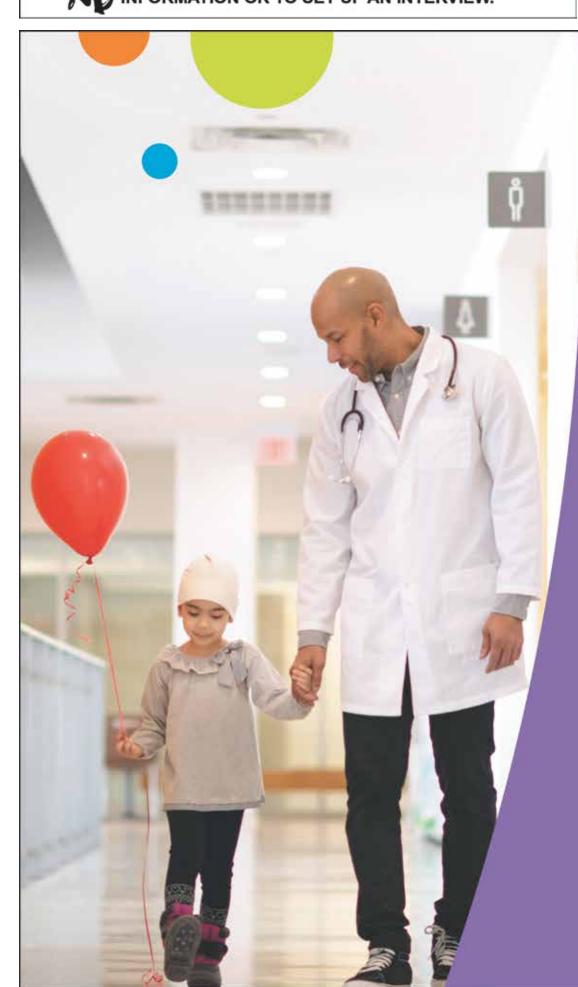

Those with rheumatoid arthritis, lupus, diabetes, or liver and kidney disease may be at a higher risk of developing osteoporosis. Petite, thin women with fair complexions are at higher risk, as are smokers and those who consume high levels of caffeine.

Even without other risk factors, the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force recommends DEXA scans for all women who are 65 and older.

Subject to the presence of these risk factors, Medicare may cover DEXA scans every two years, with private insurance companies usually following suit. You and your physician can consider all of these risk factors when deciding whether to have a DEXA scan.

If a DEXA scan leads to a diagnosis of osteopenia or osteoporosis, your doctor may suggest treatments including weight-bearing exercise, calcium and vitamin D supplements, and a variety of prescription medications

The eviction moratorium needs to expire

By Steve Chapman

Emergency situations can justify actions that would normally be inexcusable. The social order is not damaged if a lost hiker breaks into an unoccupied cabin to avoid freezing to death. The damage comes if the exception becomes the norm and cabin owners lose all protection

In the early months of the pandemic, the federal government was doing everything it could think of to limit the damage from COVID-19. One measure was a ban on evictions by landlords at a time when many renters were suddenly out of work and unable to pay.

Originally part of the coronavirus relief package passed by Congress and signed by President Donald Trump, the moratorium was extended in September by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Congress later extended it again, and when that extension lapsed, the CDC renewed it until the end of June. Some states, including California, New York and Illinois, imposed their own bans.

The overall policy made sense during a grave public health crisis. Depositing millions of tenants onto the streets and into crowded shelters would have accelerated the spread of the virus. The moratorium originated when cities and states were enforcing lockdowns. People who lose their homes can't very well isolate at

But the ban created widespread hardship for the people who provide these homes: landlords. Many are small-business people who depend on rental payments to cover mortgages, property taxes, utilities and maintenance. They fill a vital role in the economy. Their reward has been to incur a burden that properly belongs to all of us.

But in June, a decision by the Supreme Court blocked any extension beyond July 31 without legislation. President Joe Biden has chosen to respect the ruling. In this, he parted ways with tenants rights groups and Rep. Maxine Waters, D-Calif., who urged him to defy the court and Biden said he wanted an extension to be approved by Congress, as the court requires. But that wouldn't fix the fundamental injustice of compelling property owners to provide free housing.

A lawsuit filed by Realtors associations in Alabama and Georgia says that landlords are losing $13 billion each month in unpaid rent, and the total damage could exceed $200 billion.

It may be worth these sums to avert a flood of evictions. If so, though, the cost should be borne by taxpayers at large, not loaded onto one disfavored group.

Our leaders have recognized as much, up to a point. Since December, Congress has approved $47 billion in assistance to renters so they could meet their obligations. But the amount falls well short of what is needed. Not only that, distribution has been glacially slow.

The Treasury Department recently reported that only 12% of the money found its way to tenants and landlords in the first half of this year. More than half of tenants are not even aware that they can get emergency aid, according to the Urban Institute.

"There can be no excuse for any state or locality not to promptly deploy the resources that Congress appropriated to meet this critical need of so many Americans," said White House press secretary Jen Psaki. A spokeswoman for the city of Los Angeles told The Washington Post that it stopped taking applications because of "unprecedented demand that far exceeded the program funding.'

With inadequate resources and bureaucratic delays, landlords are required to keep going without compensation. They can't collect rent from millions of tenants, and they can't remove them to accommodate residents who will pay. Renters protected by the moratorium are still liable for back rent, but landlords will have a devil of a time trying to get

The main rationales for the moratorium are obsolete. The economy has rebounded strongly in recent months, allowing the majority of people who lost their jobs to return to the payrolls. The public health risks of evictions have declined since free vaccines became universally

The harm, however, remains — and it goes beyond the immediate financial loss to property owners. Rental housing is bound to be lost as some landlords are forced to sell. Potential buyers will have to weigh the risk of being victimized by future moratoriums. In the long run, tenants will also lose out.

The federal moratorium was intended to address a dire short-run calamity. But it may end up creating a permanent one.

How Cuomo got away with it for so long

By Elizabeth Spiers

There's a frequently recurring narrative that plays out when a public figure is accused of sexual harassment: a chorus of defenders inevitably emerges to assert that the accused is actually a nice guy, historically respectful of women, and where applicable, has daughters who don't appear to loathe him. Some of these defenders point out that the accused treated them well and never harassed them personally, as if that detracts from the credibility of the allegations.

When two former staffers accused New York's governor, Andrew Cuomo, of sexual harassment in February, this ritual chorus of defenders was nowhere to be found. Few people raced to his side — in part because the usual lines of defense just don't apply. Mr. Cuomo is not a nice guy, and he has mistreated so many people that the sexual harassment accusations seem like predictable transgressions in a litany of abuses stretching back years. (He does, however, have daughters, and they don't appear to loathe him.)

The 165-page report issued Tuesday by the office of State Attorney General Letitia James cites a pattern of abuse that contributed to a toxic work environment in the governor's office. Mr. Cuomo's team has claimed that a pernicious work environment is just a feature of working in politics, a profession that is not particularly polite. But plenty of government employees will attest that no boss or colleague has ever in a professional setting invited them to play strip poker on a work trip, groped them or asked whether they have ever had sex with older men. Mr. Cuomo stands accused of doing all three. (He denies making inappropriate sexual advances.)

The governor has also been known to retaliate gleefully against people who get in his way, as he did against one of his accusers, Lindsey Boylan, a former aide, trying to discredit her testimony and damage her professional reputation. His bottomless stamina for prosecuting his critics in this way creates an environment where other employees are afraid to hold him accountable, lest they find themselves on the receiving end of one of his aggressive payback

All of these things have given people around Mr. Cuomo — and often, the general public — a sense that he operates like a macho Machiavelli who views other people as instruments for accumulating power and that he believes he is entitled to that power regardless of what the public thinks or wants. It is his political birthright, and public service appears to be a secondary consideration.

It's unsurprising, then, that this sense of entitlement would extend to Mr. Cuomo's treatment of women. Men who unapologetically harass women believe on some level that they are entitled to sexual attention from the women they harass. Instead, they offer mealy-mouthed statements that technically include the words "I'm sorry" but terminate in some variation of "that your feelings were hurt."

"I never touched anyone inappropriately or made inappropriate sexual advances," Mr. Cuomo still Perversely, his abrasiveness may have given him a sort of immunity to consequences until now, at least when it comes to his public image. Any time he exhibits terrible interpersonal behavior, it can be regarded as an intrinsic part of his personality. He's established a reputation as a jerk who treats people badly, so people shrug when he proves, yet again, that he is a jerk who treats people badly. His behavior is normalized because it seems normal for Andrew

Mr. Cuomo himself reinforces this perception. When accused of bestowing an unwanted kiss upon a woman at a wedding in 2019, he said, "You can find hundreds of pictures of me kissing people." And "It is my way of greeting people," as though the fact that he has always behaved this way excuses his actions. He will even point out that his father, one of his predecessors as governor, Mario Cuomo, did the same.

There's a bit of grudging admiration in some circles for his tactics. Over his 10 years as governor, he has employed those tactics to get what he wants, from reportedly working to help Republicans maintain power in the State Senate to allegedly undermining an anticorruption commission his own office created once it became apparent that it was also scrutinizing groups with ties to him. There are people who have benefited from those victories. But being good at consolidating and buttressing power is not synonymous with good governance, and Mr Cuomo's strategic belligerence often masks his failures.

It's also worth noting that some New Yorkers like the idea of a tough guy with sharp elbows in office because they conflate toughness with resiliency and sometimes fail to notice that what appears to be toughness may just be a lack of empathy. If the stereotype of New Yorkers is that they are all rude, brash, in-your-face personalities with New York City-size egos, Mr. Cuomo fits the bill.

Whether he'll resign or risk impeachment remains to be seen. But for now, he remains defiant. Resigning would mean admitting that the power he has accumulated can be taken away as a consequence of his inappropriate behavior, a reality the governor appears to find inconceivable. It would also force him to acknowledge wrongdoing and possibly issue a real apology. And this tough guy may be too weak to own

It's past time to act on climate change

By Kate Brown

If you are on the East Coast, the sunrises you saw last week were probably tinged with a bit of red. That haze was the smoke from the fires scorching the West, including the 400,000-acre-plus Bootleg Fire in southern Oregon, the largest in the country at the moment and the latest in a string of climate-related natural disasters to befall my state.

We are no strangers to forest fires in the West. About half of Oregon, some 30 million acres, is forestland. But in the past decade, as our summers have grown longer, hotter and drier, our lush forests have turned into tinderboxes. I have declared drought emergencies in 22 of our 36 counties already this year, as rivers and reservoirs run low because of insufficient snowpack and the lack of rainfall. Last summer, Oregon experienced its most devastating fire season in many years, when more than 2,000 fires burned 1.2 million acres. We lost at least nine lives and more than 5,000 homes and commercial structures. Fires burned in Clackamas County outside the Portland metro area, causing the area to have some of the world's worst air quality for several days, and through Santiam Canyon, on the outskirts of Salem, our state capital.

This summer, we are already on pace to eclipse last year's totals, and it's only the first few days of August. In June, Portland set a 116-degree high-temperature record, while Salem reached 117 degrees, also a record. About 200 people lost their lives in Oregon and Washington. In February, Oregon was hit by unseasonably harsh ice and wind storms that knocked out power to hundreds of thousands of households. Before that, counties were hit by flooding. A recent climate assessment of the state by the Oregon Climate Change Research Institute at Oregon State University warned that "the number and intensity of heavy precipitation events, particularly in winter, is projected to increase throughout the 21st century.'

And, as is the case with the Covid-19 pandemic, our most vulnerable communities are hardest hit by these disasters: rural and low-income ones and communities of color that are already disproportionately affected by longstanding disparities and systemic racism. Because of that, our Black, Indigenous, Latino, Asian and Pacific Islander residents face a disproportionate burden of the economic, health and safety impacts of climate change.

We are taking steps in the short term to adapt to this new normal of harsh weather and a fire season that never ends. But over the long term, we must take concerted, nationwide action to address climate change. It's one climate. We need to put politics aside and act as we watch its changes play out.

We are working to lead the way in Oregon, with some of the most ambitious goals among the states for reductions in greenhouse gas emissions and the adoption of electric vehicles. In 2020, I signed an executive order to reduce carbon dioxide emissions, and Oregon is finalizing rules to cap emissions from our largest transportation, industrial and natural gas sources. Last week, I signed into law Oregon's clean energy bill, mandating 100 percent clean electricity by 2040 — one of the fastest state timelines in the nation. The bill is rooted in the idea that our electric infrastructure should support opportunities for living-wage jobs, work force equity and energy

I signed the bill at Electric Island, the first publicly accessible fast-charging station designed especially for heavy-duty electric trucks and buses near the Interstate 5 freight corridor — the product of a partnership between Daimler Trucks North America and Portland General Electric. As chair of the Western Governors' Association, I worked with my fellow governors to expand access to electric vehicles and charging infrastructure across the West, prioritizing rural and low-income areas and communities of color.

We have a strong partnership with the Biden administration, which has combined a collaborative approach with my state to wildfire response and preparedness with investments in clean energy, climate action and environmental justice.

What we need now is bold action from Congress. The recently announced infrastructure deal, which includes the largest ever investment in electric vehicle infrastructure, is a great start, but we must continue to do more. As the bills are finalized in the legislative process, lawmakers must look for opportunities to reduce emissions and modernize the electrical grid. We have an opportunity right now to get millions of Americans back to work in clean energy jobs, address the climate crisis and center equity in our investments.

Building back better means building a more just and equitable country for all. In Oregon, we have taken decisive action on climate while still growing our economy, with many green technology companies choosing Oregon for their operations.

States and cities are on the front lines of the climate crisis. But this is a problem that knows no borders. Climate change is playing out here now, with a fury, but it will be in your backyard next. People are dying. Congress must act, now.

Kate Brown is the governor of Oregon.

Underwhelming library

Dear Editor:

The much heralded reopening of the Downey City Library is very disappointing.

The bibliographic poverty of adult books is shocking. I know the Downey Rotary Club donates one book per week to the children's library and they have been doing it for the last 30 years. So they should have at least 1,500 children's books.

Regretfully they don't have many adult books. I went searching for 10 books and the library had only two of them. The titles of the books I didn't find are "The Black Swan," "Irrational Exuberance," "Life in Half a Second," "Silver Spoon Kids," "Liar's Poker," "Fashionable Nonsense,"

"Selfish Gene" and "The Origins of Financial Crises." All of these books are well known and any self respecting library would have them.

To make matters worse, the Downey Library does not have the capability of borrowing books from nearby libraries. Can you believe it?

The remodeled building looks nice but a library with no books is of

I hope the powers to be also invest in books in addition to buildings and that they upgrade the library capabilities so that they can borrow books from better equipped neighboring libraries.

Downey Symphony returns for first performance in 17 months

■ The symphony is set to perform at Downey's Concerts in the Parks series at Furman Park Wednesday.

By Lorine Parks

DOWNEY - "I am beyond elated," said Sharon Lavery, music director and conductor of the Downey Symphony Orchestra, "for us to be able to perform again. We have all missed it so very much."

The Downey Symphony will perform on Wednesday, Aug. 11, at Furman Park as the closing musical event for the city's Concerts in the Park series. "It's our first time performing for the Downey community since our Beethoven concert in January of 2020," said Sharon.

The stirring "Olympic Fanfare and Theme" by John Williams will open the program, and the audience will be treated to such delights as Libertango by Piazolla and Clarinet Candy by Leroy Anderson.

"Patty Massey will play the solo," said Sharon. "Piazzolla is a master of the nuevo tango, and his Libertango incorporates elements of jazz and classical

The Downey Symphonic Society is planning a threeconcert season in the Downey Theatre, opening Saturday, Oct. 23, so save the date. The Symphonic Society also offers Music in the Schools, an outreach program that was missing this past year, due to COVID restrictions.

The free Pops in the Park is the Symphonic Society's gift to the Downey community. There is no admission charge as the Society pays for the musicians, who are professionals drawn from the greater Los Angeles

It costs about $15,000 to present the 7 p.m. twilight performance, a little less than half the expense of a subscription concert in the Downey Theatre. For one thing, a symphonic band is smaller than the full indoor stage ensemble, and consists of woodwind, brass, and a battery of percussion instruments, plus strings.

"Our string section in the park will be a touch smaller this year," said Sharon, "so we can create a little bit more breathing room on the outdoor stage, but since we have a great sound crew at the park it won't even be noticed.

Classics like Gould's American Salute, Broadway tunes, and especially "The Phantom of the Opera," as arranged for a symphonic ensemble, will make for a special experience.

"One deeply felt tradition of our summer concerts has always been the Armed Forces Salute, said Sharon. "There are very few of the old-time veterans left, but today women as well as men and their families stand when their service anthem is played."

One special Downey tradition will have to wait till next year, Sharon explained

"I am ending with Sousa because, in my opinion, there's no better finale for an outdoor pops concert than the Stars and Stripes Forever.'

"Unfortunately, for everyone's safety," she said. "We won't be able to have the kids conduct this year. Hopefully things will be completely back to normal by next summer and we'll have them back up on stage conducting away.'

Live theater and music return to Rio Hondo College

WHITTIER – Live theater is returning to Rio Hondo College, which will stage and livestream two online performances of the Broadway musical "Working," at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 6 and Saturday, Aug. 7.

"Working" is a series of vignettes telling the stories of everyday Americans, in their own words, with professions ranging from steelworker to corporate executive. Based on a book written by oral historian Studs Terkel and developed for the stage by lyricist and composer Stephen Schwartz, the musical debuted on Broadway in 1978. A 2012 revival of "Working" added two new songs written by Lin-Manuel Miranda, which will be included in the College's production.

"We are proud to bring back live theater this summer," Rio Hondo College theater professor and "Working" director William Korf said. "We feel 'Working' is a great, uplifting musical that will resonate with our audiences with its themes of perseverance and pride.'

Korf, who has dealt with scores of challenges staging live performances in his 34 years at Rio Hondo, said he is excited to overcome the technological obstacles of a livestreamed musical production.

Rio Hondo College student Brianna Alanis will play three separate roles, including Dolores, a waitress from Chicago, and Maggie, a domestic worker who wants more for her children, and sing two solo numbers.

"I love theater and singing. I sing everywhere - at work, at home. My plan is to eventually transfer to a four-year university and continue studying theater, Alanis said. "'Working' is very relatable and fun because it is based on real people, and you get to make choices on how you bring them to life. I'm not nervous performing, but dealing with tech issues is a little scary.

Juver Ramirez graduated from Rio Hondo College in June, earning an Associate's degree, and is now attending Cal State Long Beach. Korf enlisted Ramirez to serve as an assistant director, as well as portray a variety of characters, including Freddy, a role created by Miranda. Ramirez does not have a background in music, but understands that versatility is essential for a career in theater.

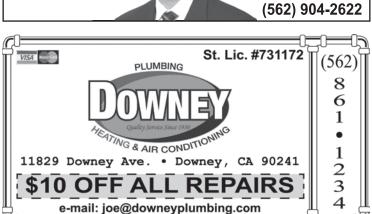

"Theater is a tough field to enter, and I want to become familiar with all aspects of stagecraft," Ramirez said. "Tech is the real challenge here, and I will assist in helping cast members with lighting and sound. This is the most diverse cast that we've had at Rio Hondo and I am just getting a chance to meet them. Theater helps me think on my feet, plus it's really Rio Hondo is supporting the production by providing lighting fixtures and green screens for cast members to use at home. Students can also borrow a college computer if necessary, and the college will work to provide hot spots for students with Wi-Fi issues.

Congress allocates $1 million for Downey to improve groundwater

DOWNEY - Rep. Lucille Roybal-Allard voted in favor of a funding package last week that includes $1 million for Downey to complete remediation work on its groundwater wells.

seven government funding bills that passed the House on a 219-

The $1 million committed to Downey "will allow the City of Downey to proactively remediate critical groundwater wells critical groundwater wells that contain polyfluoroalkyl (PFAS) at rates higher than the recommended limits set by the State of California," Roybal-Allard's office said in a statement.

"As we continue to recover from the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, Democrats are making long-term investments to help America build back better," Roybal-Allard said.

"I am particularly pleased that I have been able to meet some of my district's most pressing needs with the inclusion of my Community Project Funding requests. With this funding, we will be able to rebuild an economy that is inclusive and resilient and that benefits Americans of all backgrounds.3

Roybal-Allard, Biden talk citizenship for immigrants

DOWNEY - Rep. Lucille Roybal-Allard, the original coauthor of the Dream Act and Downey's representative in Congress, joined her colleagues in the Congressional Hispanic Caucus at the White House for a meeting with President Joe Biden to discuss the next steps for providing a pathway to citizenship for America's immigrants.

Roybal-Allard issued the following statement after the meeting

"After a very positive meeting with President Biden, I am inspired and hopeful that we can provide millions of immigrants with a pathway to citizenship in the upcoming budget reconciliation package.

"The President made it clear that he believes in our fundamental American values and that he recognizes and appreciates the humanity and dignity of our nation's immigrants. He knows that Dreamers, Temporary Protected Status (TPS) holders, essential workers, farm workers, and all immigrants contribute enormously to the United States. They strengthen our economy by working hard, paying taxes, and dedicating their lives to the nation they call home. This has never been more true than during the Coronavirus pandemic, when thousands of undocumented immigrants risked their own lives serving on the front lines.

"With the President's $reaffirmed\,commitment\,to\,joining$ us in the fight to put immigrants on a pathway to citizenship, I am hopeful that we will see real change in our immigration policy that will benefit us all and that will allow immigrants to continue their extensive contributions to our nation."

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO CIRCULATE RECALL PETITION

TO THE HONORABLE CATHERINE ALVAREZ: Pursuant to Section 11020, California Elections code, the undersigned registered qualified voters of the State of California, Los Angeles County, City of Downey, hereby give notice that we are the proponents of a recall petition and that we intend to seek your recall and removal from the office of Downey City Council Member, District 3, in the State of California, Los Angeles County, City of Downey and to demand election of a successor in that office.

Council Member Alvarez has violated the trust of Downey residents in two major areas. The grounds for the recall are as follows:

1. Ms. Alvarez violated the public trust by failing to disclose her March 12, 2014, felony welfare fraud charge, Penal Code Section 10980(c)(2) and lying under oath Penal Code Section 118(a) charges. In addition, Ms. Alvarez was convicted of misdemeanor petty theft and has a lifetime han from entering the Michaels lifetime ban from entering the Michaels store at The Downey Landing.

2. On April 25, 2021 at 6 am, hundreds of people and vendors, including Council member Alvarez, wearing her official City Council jacket, attended an unpermitted event at Apollo Park. There were no proper permits pulled nor did they follow CDC guidelines during the pandemic. Downey Police were called to disburse the crowd several times for disturbing the peace and several municipal code violations. The event is still under investigation by the Downey Police Department. This shows an abuse of power by an elected official.

The printed names, signatures, and residence addresses of the proponents are as follows: (The least possible number of proponents is 10, however, more than 10 may be required by law.)

PROBATE

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF CHESTER GUY BUCHHOLZ Case No. 21STPB07350

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of CHESTER GUY BUCHHOLZ A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Tanya Lee Raynow in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.
THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Tanya Lee Raynow be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on Sept. 16, 2021 at 8:30AM in Dept. No. located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, shows good cause why the court should not

CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the

Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence. encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult the other contents of these resources you should be either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgage hepsficiary trustee or a court mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (844) 477-7869 or visit this Internet Web site WWW.STOXPOSTING.COM, using the file number assigned to this case 095333-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: Effective January 1, 2021, you may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855) 313-3319, or visit this internet website www.clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 095333-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Obituaries

Angela Bailey, Olympic silver medal sprinter

Angela Bailey, a Canadian sprinter who won a silver medal at the 1984 Olympics, died July 31 of cancer at age 59.

Bailey was poised to go to her first Olympics in 1980, but after the U.S. boycotted the Summer Olympics in Moscow, she didn't make it to the Olympics until 1984 in Los Angeles. There, she was on the silver medal-winning 4×100 meters relay team.

Later, Bailey set a Canadian women's record in the 100 meter dash in 1987, competing in Budapest with a time of 10.98 seconds. The record still stands in her home country; the women's world record is 10.49 seconds, set by Florence Griffith-Joyner in 1988.

Bailey went on to compete in the 1988 Seoul Olympics. In later years, she was a lawyer in Ontario.

Celina Sotomayor, mother of Supreme Court justice

Celina Baez Sotomayor, a registered nurse who was the mother of Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor, died July 25 of complications of cancer at the age of 94.

A native of Puerto Rico, Sotomayor served in the Women's Army Corps during World War II, later moving to New York City.

She married after the war but was widowed when their two children were young. Sotomayor raised the children as a single mother, working first as a telephone operator and then earning her nursing degree and working as a registered nurse.

Her children grew up to become a Supreme Court justice and a physician.

Popeil founded Ronco in 1964, building on what he learned from his father, an inventor and businessman who developed the Veg-O-Matic.

The younger Popeil and Ronco became known for gadgets including the Inside-the-Shell Egg Scrambler, Mr. Microphone, and Smokeless Ashtray. Popeil himself advertised Ronco's products in late-night informercials, perfecting the art of convincing consumers they needed an Electric Food Dehydrator, Cap Snaffler, or Ronco Rhinestone Stud Setter.

Popeil became known for catchphrases: The Showtime Rotisserie made it easy to cook meat so buyers could "Set it and forget it!" In an ad for the Veg-O-Matic, Popeil enthused, "It

Joan Ullyot, runner, physician and activist

Joan Ullyot, a physician and runner whose research and advocacy helped persuade the International Olympics Committee (IOC) to add a women's marathon to the Summer Olympics, died June 19 of cardiac arrest at the age of 80.

Until the mid- to late 20th century, conventional wisdom said that women should not run long distances or engage in vigorous activity. Some said they were simply unable to complete athletic feats like a marathon, while others held that the exercise would cause irreversible damage to their bodies.

Ullyot was among the women who proved this theory wrong, running marathons regularly. And her research showed that she was no outlier: Women could and did run long distances without harming their health.

Ullyot's 1976 book, "Women's Running," made the case for distance running for women, and it became an inspiration to other female runners.

She helped the International Runners' Committee make its case to the IOC for a women's marathon to be added to the

When they first lobbied for the women's marathon in 1977, the IOC refused. But in 1984, the women's marathon was added to the Los Angeles Olympics.

Ullyot continued running marathons herself, competing until age 56 and running for pleasure later.

Her personal best marathon time was 2:47:39, achieved at age 48.
