City Council may consider creating flag guidelines

■ CITY COUNCIL ROUNDUP: Downey could explore options to limit the types of flags flown at public facilities.

By Alex Dominguez Staff Writer

DOWNEY - Mayor Pro Tem Hector Sosa on Tuesday asked city staff to "agendize a conversation" on the subject of a neutral flag policy, and what litigation the city could potentially expose itself to in the absence of adopting one.

A neutral flag policy would ban the flying of nongovernmental flags on city buildings.

Voters in Huntington Beach approved a similar measure last month. Critics notably within the LGBTQ+ community - called it discriminatory.

Sosa's request came after a handful of residents Tuesday lobbied for a flag policy.

The City of Downey flies four flags - the American, state, city and MIA-POW flags – year-round. In 2021, the city council voted to fly the LGBTQ Pride flag every June.

Paging Dr. Frischer...

By Dr. Alan Frischer

've been practicing medicine in this wonderful community for many years. Can you among my patients?

Anxiety. The world has the economy, politics, the environment, our jobs, our savings. Add to that the leftover effects of the pandemic, which include for some a self-imposed isolation from family and friends. Yes, anxiety is running rampant.

Anxiety manifests in many ways. Some find themselves in a constant state of worry; overthinking plans and dwelling on worst-case outcomes. Some have difficulty handling uncertainty; becoming indecisive and fearful of making the wrong decision. Some find it difficult to relax; feeling restless, keyed up, on edge. Some have difficulty concentrating.

Clearly, anxiety is not merely a mental disorder. Physical manifestations include fatigue, trouble sleeping, difficulty concentrating, headaches, palpitations, abdominal pain, muscle tension and aches, nervousness, being easily startled, sweating, nausea, diarrhea, flare-ups of irritable bowel syndrome, and irritability.

None of what follows will surprise you, but consider incorporating some of these coping mechanisms to help manage life during these challenging times:

Schedule time every day for relaxation techniques such as meditation, yoga, tai chi, breathing exercises, massage, music, and walks or other forms of exercise.

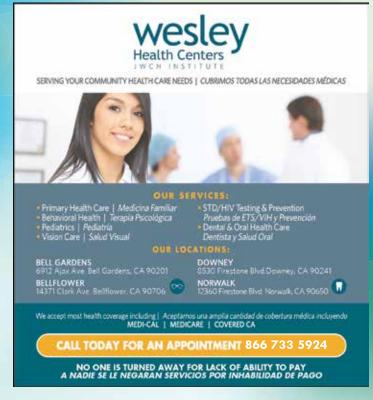

- · Encourage yourself to pursue hobbies.
- · Make a conscious effort to maintain a positive attitude.
- Instead of becoming angry, defensive, or passive, work on stating your feelings, opinions, or beliefs. In other words, be assertive, rather than aggressive.
- · Work on developing time management skills.
- · Keep an anxiety journal, ranking events on a scale of 1 to 10. Note those activities which make you feel anxious (watching TV news, perhaps?), and the thoughts going through your mind before and during. Note what makes you feel less anxious.
- · If you hyperventilate (experiencing dizziness, numbness/tingling, and/or lightheadedness), exhale into a paper bag and then inhale from the bag. This increases your carbon dioxide level, which can reduce the urge to breathe rapidly, and reduces the dizziness and tingling.
- Seek out support from your community: your family, friends, neighbors, or religious organization. Spend time with those you love, even if it's merely over the phone or online.
- · Limit alcohol, caffeine, tobacco, sugar, and recreational drugs.
- · Take care of your body with exercise, hydration, nutrition, and sleep. Your body will handle stress far more easily when it is fit and healthy.

Let's remind ourselves to periodically evaluate our lifestyle, and incorporate some proven coping techniques. If they don't seem to help, I urge you to seek treatment with your physician, therapist, or other health care professional.

NASA was never the same after the Columbia tragedy

The 2003 Columbia space shuttle disaster altered NASA's place in the space industry.

By Douglas Brinkley

Douglas Brinkley is a professor of history at Rice University. He is author of "American Moonshot: John F. Kennedy and the Great Space Race."

Around the start of this century, the world counted only two major players in manned space exploration: The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and Roscosmos, the Russian Space Agency. Ten years later, the heavens were crowded by comparison, with a number of private companies vying to restart the space race with Russia. Internationally, China had regular manned missions and the United Arab Emirates, Japan and the European nations were drawing close to success.

The turning point between the two eras was an unforeseeable tragedy: the disintegration of the Columbia space shuttle on February 1, 2003. It occurred almost exactly 17 years after a previous shuttle, the Challenger, burned just after lift-off.

That 1986 disaster had resulted in a towering wave of public anger at NASA, mainly because top officials had been advised very specifically to scrub the launch. Simply put, the weather was too cold for the equipment. The intrepid American space program survived the Challenger horror, but NASA's self-doubt never subsided. Not even two decades later, after the Columbia exploded during reentry, the two deadly failures broke the faith that many among the American people had in NASA.

Seven astronauts were onboard the Columbia for its 16-day mission, primarily to perform scientific experiments. The launch in mid-January had been uneventful – except for one thing. The team assigned to review video of the voyage noticed what seemed to be a loose piece of the protective foam layer insulating the shuttle's external tank. Soon thereafter a chunk of foam about as big as a briefcase dislodged and struck the front of the left wing. The analysis of the malfunction was communicated to others at NASA, but the problem was considered minor.

Shuttles were invariably damaged during missions. It was only to be expected. "There's this term in NASA called accepted risk," explained Nancy Currie-Gregg, who flew four shuttle missions, the last in 2002, "There is no such thing as zero-risk space flight, but how do you decide how much risk is acceptable?"

Because other shuttle missions had returned safely with "shredded" surface tiles – and because the stalwart Columbia had brought astronauts home from 27 previous flights – many NASA officials were lulled into complacency. They went so far as to assure the pilot and commander via email that "there is no concern ... We have seen the same phenomenon on several other flights and there is absolutely no concern for entry."

NASA officials also decided against enlisting spy satellite photography to examine the shuttle damage more thoroughly. If they had, it's possible that the astronauts could have repaired the spaceplane or at least abandoned it for refuge on the International Space Station. Instead, as the Columbia made its descent from space, superheated atmospheric gases entered through the gaping hole left by the dislodged chunk of foam. The structure was compromised and the shuttle broke apart in midair. Wreckage spread over Texas and Louisiana.

In the wake of the disaster, NASA Administrator Sean O'Keefe said in a statement, "This is indeed a tragic day for the NASA family, for the families of the astronauts who flew on STS-107, and likewise is tragic for the Nation."

As the Columbia Accident Investigation Board (CAIB) noted in its final report, "the NASA organizational culture had as much to do with this accident as the foam." All of NASA's launches were suspended for two years. While the shuttles eventually flew again, post-Columbia, the program was stunted and curtailed.

But as NASA floundered, Elon Musk's upstart SpaceX scheduled its own launches. Musk's undertaking initially proved just how hard rocket science is, though his company finally found success in 2008 with its reusable Falcon Heavy rocket. The billionaire's club was usurping NASA in space. At about the same time, Jeff Bezos' Blue Origin was developing rockets aimed mainly at suborbital flight. United Launch Alliance brought two legacy aerospace companies together, Boeing and Lockheed Martin, in a concerted effort to develop and launch massive rockets. All four companies are thriving today in the space industry.

Virgin Galactic, an American company operated by Sir Richard Branson, is dedicated to space tourism rather than exploration. Likewise, Axiom Space was founded in 2016 to establish a space station for adventurers. And now, SpaceX has set its sight on returning humans to the moon.

Space entrepreneurs were themselves launched into action, driven by the chance to make money during NASA's lull after the demise of the Columbia. NASA, far from feeling threatened, has encouraged many of the private companies with massive contracts. The agency already had a long history of dealing with subcontractors, using its pocketbook to steer aerospace development; that tradition has adjusted seamlessly to the current space economy.

Whether the rapacious current era in space will be propelled by the idealism of President John F. Kennedy's American Moonshot is an uncertain question. Certainly, the seven astronauts doing round-the-clock experiments in physics on the Columbia had, just as JFK hoped, "set sail on this new sea because there is new knowledge to be gained, and new rights to be won, and they must be won and used for the progress of all people."

Opioid crisis, homelessness problems compounded by bad actors

A multi-faceted approach is required to address the issues facing our county.

By Jonathan Solomon

As a proprietor of a gun store nestled in the vibrant community of Burbank, California, I am afforded a unique vantage point from which to witness the intricate web of societal challenges that beset our city.

Foremost among these trials is the insidious grip of opioid addiction, a blight that not only ravages lives but also fuels a dangerous uptick in crime rates. Yet, as we confront this epidemic, it is imperative to recognize the multifaceted nature of our county's woes, which are compounded by factors such as corporate malfeasance, rampant homelessness, and the staggering cost of living.

The steady influx of patrons seeking firearms for self-defense serves as a stark reminder of the pervasive sense of fear and vulnerability that permeates our neighborhoods. This phenomenon, though often attributed solely to individual anxieties, is inextricably linked to broader systemic failures, chief among them being the opioid crisis. McKinsey Consulting's strategic partnership with Purdue Pharmaceuticals, engineered to maximize profits from highly addictive opioids like OxyContin, cannot be overstated in its role in exacerbating addiction and the ensuing surge in criminal activity. The consequences are dire: fractured families, embattled communities, and lives shattered by violence.

As custodians of public safety, we cannot ignore the systemic failures that fueled the opioid crisis. We must hold accountable the corporate entities who played a significant role in its devastation, and implement stricter regulations to prevent similar tragedies.

Undeniably, powerful players like Purdue Pharma bear heavy responsibility. In 2023, the company pleaded guilty to three criminal charges related to its marketing of OxyContin, agreeing to pay over $5 billion in fines and resolve thousands of lawsuits from individuals and communities harmed by the drug. McKinsey & Company, a consulting firm that advised Purdue on marketing strategies, agreed to pay over $640 million to settle lawsuits that they helped fuel the crisis. Yet they're still powerful actors fueling socio-economic disparities in Los Angeles County.

To comprehensively mend the tears in our social fabric, we must also squarely face the looming specter of homelessness that casts a shadow over our streets. The visible presence of individuals grappling with homelessness not only underscores systemic failures in our social safety net but also exacerbates feelings of insecurity among residents. As resources are strained and support systems falter, marginalized individuals are left vulnerable to exploitation, some of whom succumb to the numbing allure of substance abuse, perpetuating the vicious cycle of addiction and crime.

The exorbitant cost of living in Los Angeles serves as another potent accelerant, stoking the flames of desperation that drive individuals to desperate measures. Skyrocketing rents, coupled with stagnant wages, force many residents to grapple with the harsh

Bad location for Costco

Dear Editor:

I reviewed the newspaper article about placing a Costco store on Firestone Boulevard next to the Nissan dealership.

My opinion is traffic is terrible going and coming from South Gate already. I've personally waited 15 minutes just to get on the freeway from the Downey/ South Gate border. A Costco store should be located in a different location.

Jeff Hart Downey reality of financial precarity, leaving them vulnerable to exploitation and entrapment in the cycle of addiction and crime. In such an unforgiving environment, the quest for survival often trumps concerns for public safety, breeding a sense of lawlessness that further exacerbates our city's challenges.

Personally, I have firsthand experience of the dire consequences of this desperation, having fallen victim to retail crime when my gun store was targeted for robbery last year. This violation left an indelible mark, deepening my understanding of the urgent need to exercise my Second Amendment rights to safeguard myself, my establishment, and my clientele. Now, more than ever, we must redouble our efforts to address the systemic issues that drive individuals to resort to such violent and desperate measures.

While firearms may provide a temporary sense of security for some, they alone cannot address the deepseated challenges that confront our communities. It is only through a comprehensive approach that addresses the intersecting issues of corporate misconduct, homelessness, and economic inequality that we can truly create safer, more equitable communities for all.

Pharmacy middlemen

Dear Editor:

Too many patients in our state must jump through hoops to receive the medications we rely on, and it's time our leaders step up and hold rogue middlemen known as pharmacy benefit managers (PBMs) accountable.

These companies have a stranglehold on the prescription drug marketplace, and they leave patients with higher out-of-pocket costs and fewer options for treatment.

When PBMs negotiate coverage with drug manufacturers, they extract large rebates on the prescriptions countless patients rely on. However, instead of passing down the savings intended for their customers, PBMs hold on to large chunks, forcing patients and their families to carry the lion's share of the cost burden.

While federal legislation fails to pass in Congress time and again, I'm thankful our state lawmakers are taking up legislation like Senate Bill 873, which would require PBMs to pass down the fair share of savings to patients. I hope our state lawmakers pass this legislation and that California's Congressional Delegation takes a page out of their playbook by passing similar reforms on a federal level. Leaders in both Sacramento and Washington should remember why they chose public service – the time to help Californians is now.

If they fail to step up, patients across our state will feel the effects.

The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (844) 477-7869 or visit this Internet Web site WWW.STOXPOSTING.COM, using the file number assigned to this case 108942-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: Effective January 1, 2021, you may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (855) 313-3319, or visit this internet website www clearreconcorp.com, using the file number assigned to this case 108942-CA to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. previously reported deputies were called at about 8:40 p.m. on March 31, 2021, to a home in the 5100 block of Live Oak Street after a caller said Cervantes was experiencing a mental health crisis and causing a disturbance by pushing other family members. The caller also told a dispatcher that Cervantes had obsessive compulsive disorder, depression, anxiety and was hard of hearing, deputies said.

Two deputies approached the home and asked Cervantes to come outside with them, but when he declined, they entered the home and attempted to detain him with handcuffs, according to the department. An LASD video then shows Cervantes' mother, Rosa Cervantes fighting with the cameras falling to the floor.
